THE EXHIBITION.

The Busy Note of Preparation Distinctly Heard.

WHAT IS READY FOR DISPLAY

Preparing for the Emperor and Empress of Brazil.

OFFICIAL PROGRAMME OF THE OPENING.

Rehearsal of Wagner's Centennial March.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8, 1876.

So much has been written about this Centennial Exhibition that I am afraid your readers will know nothing about it. I told you yesterday briefly how far the different departments were advanced, and it occurred to me this morning, as I was walking through the labyrinths of boxes and show cases, that the question most necessary to be answered at this time is, What is the Exhibition?

THE EXHIBITION OUTLINED.

Briefly, then, let me give this answer:—Here is an enclosure of 236 acres, in the heart of a park of 3,000 acres, on the edge of a beautiful river, and within forty-five minutes of the business centre of Philadelphia and three hours of the business centre of New York. Within there are buildings covering seventy-five acres, which you are told are twenty-five acres more than any other exposition—in itself a most deceptive statement, for many of these buildings, especially those from some of the States, are of little use. But in figures, I will say that there are within this enclosure 190 different buildings, probably 100 more, although I am guessing, than in any other exhibition. I should say that 100 of these buildings might as well not have been built. What are the buildings? Generally speaking, I would say, the main building, the Art Gallery, the Machinery Hall, the flower show, the Agricultural Department, the Woman's Pavilion and the United States Government House. Nine-tenths of the Exhibition will be found within these buildings. They are all vast, in their way—some attractive and useful, and others good enough for a show. There is an Art Gallery, which will remain as a memorial hall, the gift of the State to the city as an ornament to the Park. The Flower Building will also remain as a gift of the city for the same purpose. This Art Gallery cost $1,500,000, and is a much better building than Tweed's Court House, which cost $12,000,000. The Flower Hall cost $250,000, and I agree with Bayard Taylor that it is the prettiest thing in the grounds.

THE SEVERAL EXHIBITS.

What are the other buildings? It would take a column to enumerate them and their uses. But from my notes I take a hurried summary. A Swedish and German school house, a hunter's camp, a milk and dairy building, the Bible Society, Moorish villa, buildings for the English, German, Portuguese, Spanish, Brazilian and other governments; a medical department, Japanese house and garden, butter and cheese factory, State buildings, a New England loghouse, a Jerusalem bazaar, a Canadian loghouse, a temperance pavilion and a swarm of cigar stands, soda fountains and business exhibits from various States. Some of these buildings are unfinished, a few still in the frame; but the most of them are ready for the visitor. If you ask what are the most interesting I would say the buildings of Japan and England—about a fifth of the main building—most of the American government display, the flowers and all of Machinery Hall. As to the remainder, further inquiry must determine your correspondent's impression of their value.

THE GOVERNMENT BUILDING.

The exhibits in the government building are almost wholly in place. The classification is complete, and probably no other branch of the Exhibition will be found so perfectly arranged and showing so well as this. All the different branches of the government will be found well represented, such as of the navy, of the war and of the interior, while the Smithsonian Institute is included. Every State and Territory shows a magnificent collection of ores, especially of the precious metals, and it has been arranged that the government comes into possession of the same, the value of which is intrinsically equal to many thousands of dollars. Besides, this is the only building exclusively devoted to the exhibition of products of the United States.

THE COLONIES OF ENGLAND.

None of the various nations of the earth will make a more complete show than the Colonies or States of Australia. Comparatively few of our people are aware of the wonderful progress made during the last thirty years in this remote part of the world. Several of the cities have had a growth that has not been excelled even by Chicago, as, for instance, Melbourne has a population of about 250,000; Sydney, of 200,000; Adelaide has 35,000; Brisbane, 30,000; Auckland, 25,000 and Hobart Town, 25,000. Some of the newspapers compare most favorably with the NEW YORK HERALD and the London Times. The States represented are Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania, and their products are to be found in what may be called the northwest corner of the main building. Many of these things are peculiar and strange, and of these Queensland and New South Wales lead off with enormous quantities of wool, tin, copper, coal, new and strange varieties of native woods and gold. Tin is the great feature of the Queensland exhibition, and it is shown by the ton. Victoria will show manufactured goods, and this is the only State that is largely devoted to manufactures. All the States exhibit in common wines, raw silks, various fibres and their products. In addition are several series of large photographs illustrating agricultural, pastoral and mining life, which give almost a complete counterpart of life on our plains of New Mexico and California and the gulches of Montana and Idaho. The whole cost of the Australian States in making this exhibition will exceed $300,000, and to show the enterprise of the newspapers it is to be noted that reporters are on the Centennial grounds representing the Melbourne Argus, the Sidney Herald, Brisbane Courier, Adelaide Observer and the Queenslander at a cost of $5,000 to $6,000 each.

THE BUILDINGS WITHIN THE GROUNDS.

In addition to the 190 buildings within the grounds, enumerated above, there are others bringing the number up to about 260. Perhaps sixty of these are small structures, but all are neat and highly creditable. Of the remainder, none have cost less than $8,000, while others have required enormous sums, as from $500,000 to $1,500,000 each. The following States have erected fine buildings, at an average cost of about $8,000 each:—Tennessee, New York, Mississippi, Delaware, Connecticut, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Kansas, with Colorado; Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Indiana, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The cosmic character of the Exhibition may be gathered from a glance at the list of nations that are exhibitors—Argentine Confederation, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chili, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, Germany, Great Britain, Hawaii (Sandwich Islands), Italy, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Luxemberg, Russia, Orange Free States (Africa), Peru, Portugal, Switzerland, Spain, Sweeden, Tunis, Turkey, United States of Colombia, Venezuela. The products and especially the people of these lands are attracting the greatest attention.

THE EXHIBITION TO-DAY.

During the twenty-four hours a great change has taken place in the appearance of the Exhibition. In the American department particularly, where everything has been left until the eleventh hour, exhibitors are working with renewed zeal and energy, and many portions that yesterday looked ragged and forlorn are slowly

ASSUMING SHAPE.

In the Brazilian section, now very nearly completed, there is increased activity, under the impulse, perhaps, of having everything in perfect readiness for the Emperor's coming.

The British exhibit is rapidly approaching completion. In the Art Galleries England is entirely ready, her last pictures having been placed to-day.

THE GOVERNMENT EXHIBIT.

The United States government exhibition is the large Maltese cross shaped structure on the lake, and is to be in many respects a striking feature of the fair. It is under the control of a disciplined force of attendants, who are crowding everything to the front with praiseworthy energy, but I hardly think it will be in complete readiness by the opening day. This portion of the Exhibition has been so little written about, and has been so quietly gathered together, that the intelligent visitor will be likely to be surprised at the display to be seen there. It contains the richest and most varied collection of valuable ores ever seen in the world; there are tons upon tons of gold and silver rock, from the bowlder of Comstock ore to the red, gravelly-looking specimen of Emma mine rock. The identical and memorable specimen upon which this mine was sold and the purchasers also has been brought from England, and is one of their mineral collections under the charge of Mr. Donaldson.

THE GROUNDS

are filled with working men, and in the buildings the preparations go on day and night. Freight trains are going and coming over the net-work of rails every minute, crowded down with boxes of goods, or returning with empty cases. These latter are taken to immense sheds, outside the grounds, where they are stored with as great care as the rich goods they contained and in the same relative positions, so that when the Exhibition is over they can be found with mathematical readiness.

The bustle of preparation centres about the MAIN BUILDING.

Empty boxes and full ones encumber the aisles, and are heaped up in the exhibitors' spaces, and looking down upon the twenty-one acres of floor, from one of the side galleries it is as busy a scene as one can imagine. In the other buildings there is great activity, but the common endeavor seems to be to have all in readiness first in the main building.

THE CITY.

The citizens are making ready with great unanimity, and the stores, hotels, public buildings, banks, warehouses, offices and private residences are brilliant with flags and patriotic decorations. Mayor Stokley this morning issued a proclamation requesting the closing of places of business on Wednesday. He also suggests the display of flags and patriotic devices, and a general illumination in the evening. The State House bell will be rung for thirty minutes at sunrise, noon and sunset. It is requested that church bells be rung at the same hours. Many distinguished visitors—it would be invidious to mention names where there are so many—have already arrived, and more are coming by every train. The President will arrive to-morrow, and will spend to-morrow night at the house of Mr. Childs. He will be escorted to the grounds on Wednesday by a military procession, and, as the ride is over three miles in length, the parade will begin at half-past eight in the morning, the intention being to have the ceremonies over and the Exhibition opened to the world by noon. The ceremonies, as far as the speechmaking and music are concerned, will be brief. General Hawley and Mr. Welsh will hardly occupy more than five minutes each with their formal transfer of the buildings and grounds, and the President is not extravagant in speech, as all the world knows. The grand "Centennial March," by Wagner, will not occupy more than half an hour and Sidney Lanier's cantata is not long. Your readers have already been informed of the programme in full, published in the HERALD some time since, but the following official bulletin, just issued by the Centennial authorities, gives information which it may be well to repeat:—

THE OFFICIAL PROGRAMME.

The United States Centennial Commission announces the following orders and programme for the opening of the International Exhibition on the 10th inst.:—

The commission, with the concurring counsel of the Board of Finance, instructed its officers to give formal invitations only to persons in official position, to those officially connected with the Exhibition, and to members of the press, by reason of the impossibility of discriminating among the numerous and generous supporters of the enterprise.

All the gates except those at the east end of the main building will be open to the public at nine A. M., at the established rate of admission.

The main building, Memorial Hall and Machinery Hall will be reserved for guests and exhibitors until the conclusion of the ceremonies, about one P. M., when all restrictions will be withdrawn.

The President of the United States will be escorted to the Exhibition by Governor Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, with a division or more of troops from Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Invited guests will enter the main building from the carriage concourse at the east end or by the south middle entrance on Elm avenue. The doors will be open to them at nine A. M. They will pass to the platform in front of Memorial Hall through the north middle doors of the main building and should occupy their places before a quarter past ten A. M. All the space in the vicinity of the platform, save what may be needed for passage, will be open to the public.

The orchestra of 150 pieces and the chorus of 1,000 voices will be under the direction of Theodore Thomas, assisted by Dudley Buck.

PROGRAMME.

1. Quarter past ten A. M.—National Airs, by the Orchestra.
2. Half-past ten A. M.—Arrival of the President of the United States.
3. "Centennial Inauguration March," by Richard Wagner.
4. Prayer, by the Right Reverend Bishop Simpson.
5. Hymn, by John Greenleaf Whittier.
   Music, by John K. Paine, of Massachusetts.
   Organ and Orchestral accompaniment.
6. Presentation of the Buildings to the Commission by the President of the Centennial Board of Finance.
7. Cantata, by Sidney Lanier, of Georgia.
   Music, by Dudley Buck, of Connecticut.
   Basso solo, by Myron W. Whitney, of Boston.
8. Presentation of the Exhibition to the President of the United States by the President of the Centennial Commission.
9. Address by the President of the United States.
10. Unfurling of the Flag. Hallelujah Chorus, Salutes of Artillery and Ringing of the Chimes.
11. Procession through the Main Building and Machinery Hall.
12. Reception by the President of the United States in the Judges' Pavilion.

No flags or ensigns, except such as are permanently fixed in the buildings, will be displayed on the morning of the 10th until the signal be given. The organs and other musical instruments and the bells will await the same notice.

When the President of the United States declares the Exhibition open, the flag on the staff near him will be unfurled as a signal for the raising of all other flags and ensigns, the ringing of the chimes, the salute of one hundred guns on George's Hill and the singing of the Hallelujah Chorus of Handel by the chorus, with organ and orchestral accompaniment.

Immediately upon the announcement the Foreign Commissioners will pass into the Main Building and take places upon the central avenue, opposite their respective sections.

The President of the United States, conducted by the Director General of the Exhibition, and followed by the guests of the day, will pass through the Main Building. As the President passes the Foreign Commissioners they will join in the procession, and the whole body will move to Machinery Hall.

On his way the President will be saluted by his military escort, formed in two lines between the buildings.

In Machinery Hall, when the procession shall, as far as possible, have entered the building, the President, assisted by George H. Corliss, will set in motion the great engine and the machinery connected therewith. No further formal order of programme will be required.

The President and such of the guests as may choose to follow will be escorted by way of the north main aisle of Machinery Hall to the doors of the eastern tower and to the judges' pavilion.

The passage in return to the Main Building will be kept open for half an hour.

The President of the United States will hold a brief reception in the judges' pavilion.

Should the weather render it impossible to conduct the exercises in the open air they will be held in the Main Building, and the best regulations the circumstances may permit will be communicated to the guests upon their arrival.

By order of the Centennial Commission.

JOSEPH R. HAWLEY, President.

JOHN L. CAMPBELL, Secretary.

DOM PEDRO AND GOVERNOR RICE.

A special train over the new route, the Delaware and Bound Brook and North Pennsylvania Railroads, will leave Bound Brook to-morrow at ten o'clock A. M., will bring Governor Rice and the Boston Cadets, of Massachusetts, to this city to attend the opening ceremonies, and will return on Friday, May 12, leaving the Berks street station at half-past nine A. M. The train will be handsomely decorated and is furnished by the North Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The staff of the Governor accompanies him, the cadets being under command of Lieutenant Colonel Thomas F. Edmunds. The party will arrive at 12:30, and will be received by a battalion of the First regiment infantry, National Guard Pennsylvania, under the command of Major Charles K. Ide.

The Independent Corps of Cadets date their organization in 1741, and is composed of first class material.

Adjutant General Latta, Colonel R. M. Brinton and other members of Governor Hartranft's personal staff will receive Governor Rice and staff on behalf of Governor Hartranft, and General Bankson will also be represented by one of his personal staff officers.

The Emperor of Brazil will also arrive in his quiet way to-morrow and will go to the Continental Hotel, to the rooms now occupied by the Empress. The Emperor's status at the opening ceremonies of the Exhibition will be merely that of a private gentleman from Brazil. "The Emperor is in Brazil," he has said, and he will, by his own desire, take a seat with the Commissioners from his country, a ticket having been issued to one Pedro de Alcantara, just as it would be to John Smith.

WHAT THE DIFFERENT STATES HAVE CONTRIBUTED.

The following table shows the amount of money subscribed to the Centennial stock in the various States of this Union. It is brought nearly down to date. It is instructive as showing how the brunt of the whole Centennial celebration has been borne by a few commonwealths, while the citizens of many important States have contributed little or nothing. In view of the fact that some of the Centennial Commissioners have manifested a meddlesome spirit concerning the management of the exhibition—having done nothing for it when it most needed help—it will be interesting to know the exact status of those gentlemen, and how little their respective States have paid into the Centennial treasury, while the board bills in Philadelphia of their commissioners must be paid from the general fund:—

THEODORE THOMAS' REHEARSAL.

Theodore Thomas has just concluded a long, trying rehearsal of Wagners "Centennial March," at Horticultural Hall. The rehearsal was one that even the composer might be proud of, as the indefatigable conductor never allowed himself a moment's respite for hours. There were about 125 musicians in the orchestra, and Thomas had the most trouble with the local players, who were unaccustomed to his iron discipline and the standard of music set forth in Wagner's work. The march is far superior to either the Huldigungs or Kaiser march, by the same composer. Certainly, Mr Thomas' judgment was not at fault when he called upon the greatest living composer to honor America's Centennial. Wagner himself has a great opinion of his work, for in his last letter to Thomas he says:—

"While I give you my warmest thanks for the warm interest and great labor you have bestowed upon this subject of an appropriate march for the hundredth year of the American Republic, do not forget that this work has cost me a deal of care and trouble. I had but short time to write it, and it was composed while my mind was distracted with the production of my operas at Vienna and Berlin. You may know from the motto from Goethe which I have attached to the title page how earnest I was about it. Whatever of melody or beauty there may be in it is the inspiration of those beautiful ladies of America who made you their interpreter for me. I shall be doubly pleased if they like it. My friends here are entirely satisfied, and I think of it very highly."

The march is written in the key of G major, the score calls for three flutes, three oboes, three fagotti, one contra fagotti, three trumpets, one bass trumpet, three trombones, one contra bass tuba, four horns, triangle, cymbals, tamtam and string quartet. One distinguishing feature in the work is the simplicity of the first and leading motive, which consists of four notes. Only every musician knows the marked effect produced by Liszt in his concerto for piano in E flat, in which the motive consists of only seven notes, and in his "Faust," in which the governing theme is still shorter. The same character is in Wagner's "Centennial March." The material is simple enough, but there is real genius in the treatment of it, notwithstanding the tremendous technical difficulties with which the work abounds. It is not in the slightest degree obscure. It is written in a more popular, so to speak, vein than is generally known of the composer. It is brilliant, spirited and dashing from beginning to end. The march opens with a tutte chord in G major, then comes the first motive of four notes, succeeded by a general march theme; a peculiarity of the work is that the brass fanfare usually brought in merely to fill out a march acquires a new importance at Wagner's hands. The modulations are perplexing to the players, but are no less effective to the hearers. There comes a succession of changes from G to B major, D and C sharp, A and D flat to B major. Here the trio step in like a vision of beauty; the modulations are principally made in chromatics by the violins, the basses holding as a point d'orgue F below gradually resolving into B flat. New motives are repeated, but shorter each time, by the wind instruments, the basses being in contrary motion. The rythm of the march becomes syncopated at the end of each phrase, until there are but two bars left without syncopation. There is here a peculiar passage, the string quartet holding out in the key of E flat, the trumpets fanfaring in G, and other instruments presenting different motives. The effect is extraordinary and must be heard to be appreciated. Then comes a phrase in which wind instruments give the fanfare, as it were, in the strings present, the first triplet motive, while the basses hold the point d'orgue. The coda is immensely effective. No composer has used the effect of syncopation with more success than Wagner; that may be seen in his operas. A great deal of the dramatic power of "Lohengrin" lies in his judicious use of this one effect in music. The coda of the march is a perfect whirlwind. There are numerous reminiscences of Tristan and Isolde, the same working up to a climax from motives, or governing subjects are brought in at once. The air is filled with harmonic sound; every instrument is employed. One would think that the orchestras of the world were united in a grand hymn. Yet there is nothing sensational. It is true music, and the most glorious tribute that could be paid to the American Republic.

To-morrow afternoon other works will be rehearsed, among them a Centennial international work, by Baetens, of Thomas' orchestra, made up of the following National anthems:—"America," "Washington March," "Hail, Columbia," Argentine, "Republican March;" "Austrian Hymn;" Belgium, "La Brabancone;" Brazil, "National Hymn;" France, "Marseillaise;" Denmark, Volkslied;" Germany, "The Fatherland;" England, "God Save the Queen;" Italy, "The King's March;" Norway, "National Hymn;" Netherlands, anthem; Russia, "National Hymn;" Spain, "The Spanish King;" Sweden, "Volkslied;" Switzerland, "Honor to Helvetia;" Turkey, "Grand March." The music will be of one of the most striking features of the opening of the Centennial. An immense chorus is engaged with Thomas' orchestra.

CENTENNIAL LEGION.

A general meeting of the Executive Committee of the Centennial Legion was held yesterday at the Old Guard Armory in this city, and the organization of the Legion was fully consummated. The choice of Generals H. W. Slocum, of New York; Fitz Hugh Lee, of Virginia and A. E. Burnside, of Rhode Island, as field officers was confirmed. It was ordered that the headquarters of the Legion should be forthwith established in New York under the direction of the three field officers, and that the general staff shall be appointed at an early day. It was also voted unanimously to invite the West Point military and Annapolis naval cadets to parade with the Legion on the Fourth of July, the latter escorting, as a mark of respect to those national institutions to which the cadets belong.

The Centennial Legion comprises thirteen companies, representing the original States of the Union. Their names, and those of their officers, with the dates of their organization, are given below:—

Providence Light Infantry, of Providence, R. I., organized in 1775, Captain Bullock, commander.

Fayetteville (North Carolina) Independent Light Infantry, Major Charles Haigh commanding; organized in 1793.

Washington Light Infantry (South Carolina), Major R. C. Gilchrist commanding; organized in 1807.

Boston Light Infantry (Massachusetts), Captain N. N. Noyes; organized in 1808.

State Fencibles (Pennsylvania), Captain John W. Ryan; organized 1813.

New Haven Grays (Connecticut); organized 1816.

The Old Guard Veteran Battery (New York), Major G. W. Marlson commanding; organized in 1826.

The Norfolk Light Artillery (Virginia), Captain Sam Hodges commanding; organized in 1828.

The Muskeog Veterans (New Hampshire); organized in 1854.

The Church Rifles (Georgia), Captain Frank G. Ford commanding; organized in 1854.

Veteran Company from Fifth Maryland regiment; organized in 1860.

The Phil Kearney Guards (New Jersey), Captain W. H. DeHart commanding; organized in 1868.

The American Rifles (Delaware), Captain Samuel M. Wood commanding; organized in 1875.

This special corps is appointed to assemble in front of Independence Hall, Philadelphia, for parade on July 4, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of American independence. The field officers elected are General Fitz Hugh Lee, of Virginia, by the Southern commands; General H. W. Slocum, of New York, by the Middle State companies, and General Ambrose E. Burnside from the New England companies. The legion will be organized into three battalions. The centre will be composed of the Boston Light Infantry, of Massachusetts; Old Guard, of New York, and Washington Light Infantry, of South Carolina, and will be the color battalion. The remaining ten companies will be equally divided into right and left wings. The staff will consist of an adjutant, quartermaster, commissary and seven aides-de-camp, so selected that each of the thirteen States shall be represented in the field and staff, all appearing in full Continental uniform, mounted.

The colors of the Legion will consist of the crimson flag of Eutaw, borne by Colonel William Washington during the Revolutionary war, the Continental flag and the national colors. Each company is to bear the flag of the State it represents, Legion and company color bearers to assemble with their guards of honor in Independence Hall preparatory to the parade, previous to which there will be a grand dress review, inspection, trooping of colors, &c., on Chestnut street, in front of the old Hall, on the Fourth of July, 1876.

THE LIBERAL REPUBLICANS.

SESSION OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE AT THE FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL YESTERDAY—A CONVENTION CALLED SUBJECT TO CERTAIN CONTINGENCIES.

In response to a call issued by Mr. Ethan Allen, Chairman of the National Committee of Liberal Republicans, a meeting was held, commencing at noon yesterday, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, to take action in regard to calling an annual Convention and to discuss and dispose of such other matters as may come before the committee. At roll call there were thirty-one delegates present, twenty-one of whom were proxies. Among the members of the committee and proxies present were the following named gentlemen:—Lieutenant Governor Nickerson, of California; Judge Clarke, of Connecticut; Hon. Chas. G. Davis, of Massachusetts; Senator Fowler, of Tennessee; Governor Warmoth, of Louisiana; ex-District Attorney Riggs, of Kansas; Judge Thomas Wilson, of Minnesota; General G. W. Anderson, of Missouri; Wm. C. Newberry, of Virginia.

After roll call the Chairman delivered a short address. He reviewed the present political situation.

When the members present had exchanged views on the subject of reform nominees a motion was made to hold a liberal republican Convention, and the motion was carried. Another motion followed, that the Convention be held in Philadelphia. This was amended in so far as the place of holding the Convention was concerned. The amendment provided that the Convention be held at Cincinnati. The question was put to a vote, and it was found that twenty favored Philadelphia against eleven who desired to select Cincinnati. Half an hour's debate ensued on the subject of the proper time for holding such a Convention. It was finally determined that the Convention should be called for the 26th of July, 1876.

When these matters had been determined Judge Clarke reported:—

THE CALL.

The National Liberal Republican Committee, appointed by the Convention held in Cincinnati in May, 1872, being fully authorized so to do, hereby order that a National Liberal Republican Convention be held in the city of Philadelphia on the 26th day of July, 1876, at twelve o'clock.

Each State is invited to send to such Convention a representation equal to the number of its Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States.

All citizens who desire to maintain and perpetuate the national honor and national prosperity, who are in favor of the equality of all men before the law, of whatever race or color, religion or politics; who desire the permanence of the Union and the constitution, with the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments, and are opposed to reopening any of the questions of the late fratricidal war, long since regarded as settled; who believe that in time of profound peace the civil authority should be supreme; that the civil service of the government should be so reformed that honesty, capacity and fidelity shall constitute the only valid claim to public employment, and that to secure this no President of the United States should be a candidate for re-election; who believe that all laws of impost should be for the purposes of revenue only, and adjusted, as far as possible, with impartiality as to all sections and interests; who are in favor of a speedy return to specie payment, as demanded alike by the highest considerations of commercial morality and honest government, and, above all, who are in favor of honest men at the head of the Republic to carry out honest measures, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to this National Convention.

The present demoralized condition of the public service, the startling revelations of corruption and the consequent prostration of all industrial interests, more than confirm the warnings of the "liberal republicans" in the campaign of 1872, and have vindicated their efforts, then made, for national reform. The work of political purification, then defeated, yet remains to be done. In this work each elector, as a patriot, must perform his part. The citizen must rise above the partisan. Allegiance to country in this hour of trouble is a higher duty than allegiance to party. It is necessary that the "peculator" be eliminated as a controlling power in party politics, that office may again become the post of honor, and not the avenue to crime. Both of the old parties have a pernicious history that makes them equally impotent for further public good. While all things are possible, it nevertheless seems improbable that reform will be secured "within party lines." While this is to be hailed with joy if accomplished, experience gives but little cause to hope for it. The reformed convict is not usually the best citizen, nor will a reformed party be the best exponent of morality. The party that badly needs reformation needs burial. Out of the ruins of both of these decaying organizations true reform must come, and in such a way that the conscience of the nation will approve; otherwise all efforts will be in vain. The nominees in the purity of their characters must be the guarantors of the principles they profess, and for their support when placed before the country we cordially welcome the co-operation of all patriotic citizens, without regard to previous political affiliations.

ETHAN ALLEN,
Chairman National Liberal Republican Committee.

After the adoption of the call Mr. Hopper, of Mississippi, offered the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Cumings, of Alabama, and adopted:—

Whereas the hope is entertained by many patriotic citizens that by their continued agitation "within the party lines" one or both of the dominant parties may be led, in platforms and nominees, to grant all the political reformation required by this organization; and whereas the "liberal party," desiring only the public good, regardless of parties, does not favor causeless, independent action if it shall certainly appear that all which it seeks in the way of political purification can be as well secured through other organizations; therefore

Resolved, That if, after the republican and the democratic conventions have been held in June next, one or both of these parties shall seem, in the judgment of our chairman, Mr. Ethan Allen, to have responded to the principles and aims of the liberal republican organization, both in measures and men, in that event our chairman is hereby authorized by proclamation to annul the call for a National Convention, this day ordered. But after said conventions, and their course being unfavorable to reform, he is empowered to take such action in furthering the call for the Convention this day ordered as he may deem necessary.

The final understanding which the National Committee had before separating was briefly as follows:—

THE IFS OF THE ISSUE.

If the republicans nominate a "machine" man and the democrats nominate a good one, the liberals will side with the democrats; if the democrats nominate a "machine" man and the republicans a reformer, the liberals will go with the republicans. If both nominate good men they will split—which is not very philosophical, to say the least of it. And lastly, if both the democratic and republican parties nominate poor men, the liberals will make their own nomination.

In conclusion the following was adopted:—

Resolved, That the thanks of this National Liberal Republican Committee, and of the party and of all good and patriotic citizens are due to our chairman, Colonel Ethan Allen, for the fidelity and zeal with which he has discharged the trust confided to his hands four years ago. Bound to the liberals by no stronger tie than a sense of duty, that has nevertheless proven in his case more powerful than the allurements of office tendered by the other great parties of the country or the jeers of enemies; tested and tried and found true, he is a noble representative of that exalted character which we demand in national politics.

INDEPENDENT NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Convention of the Independent Party, which will take place in Indianapolis on the 17th of this month, will be organized in Congressional districts, and the following are the names of the delegates and alternates from the six Congressional districts into which this city is divided:—

Fourth District—Delegates—Pliny Freeman and Charles H. Williams. Alternates—Theodore Tomlinson, Jr., and John McCartney.

Fifth District—Delegates—Horace H. Day and C. Osborn Ward. Alternates—Egbert Hazard and A. C. Owens.

Sixth District—Delegates—Joseph J. Finnerty and Frank Waters. Alternates—James Magill and B. M. Medina.

Seventh District—Delegates—Dr. E. P. Miller and W. Hyatt. Alternates—George Blair and John Kittleman.

Eighth District—Delegates—Peter Cooper and James Cassin. Alternates—Thomas F. Tully and P. H. Spellman.

Ninth District—Delegates—William A. Carsey and Wallace P. Groom. Alternates—John Cavanagh and Joseph A. Taylor.

LEGAL TENDER DEMOCRATS.

The regular weekly meeting of the Legal Tender Association took place last evening at the Sturtevant House, Gideon J. Tucker in the chair. A set of resolutions were approved of, which denounce the Utica Convention as a fraud in that it approved Grant's financial policy and nominated Mr. Tilden, who is not the free choice of the democratic masses of this State. The resolutions further indorsed the action of the State of Indiana in opposing contraction of the currency, and expressed regret that the democratic majority in the House did not understand and respond to the wishes of their constituents. A national convention of the legal tender party will be held at St. Louis on June 27, and a State convention to send delegates to it will take place on June 1.

THE LOANERS' BANK.

It was stated yesterday that a large number of the depositors of the Loaners' Bank had signed an agreement, by which they bind themselves to not take any steps toward preventing an early resumption of business. Mr. Russell, the president, would not say anything regarding the bank's future action, so that nothing could be definitely ascertained. The directors are still in negotiation with several large capitalists, and until these proceedings are brought to a termination no steps toward resuming business will be taken. It is thought that such an arrangement will be made as to enable the bank's counsel, Messrs. Jewell & Pierce, to move to vacate the order of the appointment of a receiver and to allow the bank to resume.

ANNA DICKINSON'S DEBUT.

The Elite of Boston in the Globe Theatre.

THE PLAY.

Life and Death of Anne Boleyn, Queen of England.

THE ROLE OF HEROINE.

The Step from the Rostrum to the Stage a Mistake.

BOSTON, May 8, 1876.

Miss Anna E. Dickinson made her début, both as a dramatist and an actress, at the Globe Theatre this evening before what was probably the most brilliant audience ever assembled in an American place of amusement. An absorbing interest has been felt in the event ever since it was definitely announced that Miss Dickinson was to appear for the first time on the Globe stage, and this interest was greatly enhanced by the fact that she appears as playwright as well as player. Only two occasions are spoken of in comparison with the rush for seats on Monday morning of last week—the appearance here of Jenny Lind a quarter of a century ago, and the first appearance in Boston of the late Charles Dickens as a reader. But even the Dickens furore was not so great as the anxiety to see Dickinson.

It may be said with truth that, great as the assemblage was, all were seated before the curtain rose, and all over the house there was a buzz of patient expectation of what was to follow. The people of Quiquendone, whom Jules Verne has described so felicitously in his story of "Dr. Ox," never exhibited more cheerful countenances or looked at each other and nodded such friendly recognition. Poet and painter, journalist and litteratuer, belle and beau, leaders of society and leaders of thought, were assembled in the stalls or gathered in the boxes, the names of the distinguished company being too many for me to even attempt an enumeration.

ANTICIPATIONS OF MISS DICKINSON'S TRIUMPH.

Many grave heads nodded approvingly throughout the performance and the preliminary congratulations of the gifted aspirant for double honors were as numerous almost as the assemblage which gathered to be witnesses of the event. Miss Dickinson received in advance hundreds of letters from her old admirers in every part of the country, felicitating her upon the step she was taking and extending her their good wishes for her complete success in her new calling. Even the pulpit was ready to encourage her, and the Rev. James Freeman Clarke and the Rev. Robert Collyer, were especially warm in their expressions of confidence in the wisdom of her second choice of a career. The politicians, too, remembered the occasion, and she had letters of encouragement from General Butler, General Hawley, Governor Hartranft, and many others. As a matter of course the literary guild came out strong in their predictions of the brilliancy of the coming star, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Wendell Phillips heading the list of these epistolary prophets. Joaquin Miller did not forget to write, and Mark Twain, Nasby and the other "humorists" tried to be very funny over this serious occasion. Last of all the actors came out in great force, and although Manager Macauley, of Louisville, advised her to beware of taking professional advice in shaping her dramatic career the profession showed that they were not slow in following Mr. Macauley's example. Barton Hill wrote to her all the way from San Francisco, and Miss Carlotta Le Clercq and Mrs. Jennie Van Zandt were among those who sent their kind wishes. So general was the disposition to inflict epistolary kindnesses upon her that it is evident she did not read the bushels of letters she received on the subject of her début or she would not have been so well up in her lines as she was to-night.

THE FLORAL OFFERINGS.

The presents of flowers were only another phase of the general joy over Miss Dickinson's adoption of the dramatic profession, and it may almost be said that the floral offerings came from every part of the globe. Miss E. S. Stebbins, on her return from her journey round the world, stopped long enough at Omaha to despatch an order to a Boston florist. Mrs. General Chatfield, of New York, presented a large Maltese cross, with Miss Dickinson's initials in the centre. Colonel A. W. Slayback, a prominent St. Louis lawyer, sent a contribution of flowers, and among the ladies at a distance who did the same were Mrs. S. F. Austin, of Milwaukee; Mrs. Laura Curtis Bullard, of Brooklyn, and Miss Libbie Lansing, of New York. Perhaps the most beautiful tribute offered during the evening was that of Mrs. Rachel Macauley, of Louisville, known to the stage as Rachel Johnson, who sent a unique stand of flowers of the height of Miss Dickinson, with the word "Welcome" wrought in bold letters in the base. Above this were two globes—one to represent the theatre where Miss Dickinson made her debut, and the other perhaps the world she is to conquer. These, again, were surmounted by a floral wreath and a lyre, and accompanying the gift was the following stanza:—

A heartfelt greeting from afar;
No cloud must hide the rising star.
None near more true than she who sends
A welcome to the best of friends.

So numerous were these offerings that any attempt to describe them would be vain. There was a bewildering maze of flowers, which it was impossible properly to present to the heroine of the evening and which only served to obstruct the lobbies and passages of the theatre. It was an absurdity thus ostentatiously to attempt to do honor to an untried woman in a field where failure was probable if not inevitable, and it was only Miss Dickinson's abilities and modesty which saved her from being made utterly ridiculous in the eyes of everybody on account of the foolish zeal of her admirers and friends.

MISS DICKINSON'S PLAY.

And now let us see what Miss Dickinson has done to meet the expectations indicated by the letters and flowers of which she was the recipient. As she appears in the dual character of dramatist and actress I will first consider the play apart from the acting. Every line of the drama—for the piece is entirely deficient in the comedy and except in the last act exhibits none of the qualities of tragedy—was written by Miss Dickinson in a single fortnight and it was played tonight as it was originally written. Scarcely a line was interpolated or erased and the whole is a study of the time and the woman whose history is the theme of the piece. Anne Boleyn is the leading figure in the play and the other principal characters are King Henry VIII., Cardinal Wolsey, Lord Henry Percy, afterward Earl of Northumberland; Thomas Cromwell, afterward Earl of Essex, and Lady Jane Seymour. All this may be best understood from the cast, the distribution of characters and the assumption of parts being as follows:—

Anne Boleyn	Miss Anna E. Dickinson
Henry VIII	Mr. T. L. Connor
Cardinal Wolsey	Mr. J. C. Cowper
Lord Henry Percy	Mr. H. S. Murdoch
(Afterward Earl of Northumberland).
Thomas Cromwell	Mr. J. W. Lanergan
(Afterward Earl of Essex).
Sir Henry Norreys	Mr. R. J. Dillon
Duke of Norfolk	Mr. J. H. Burnett
Duke of Suffolk	Mr. W. H. Gillette
Sir Thomas Boleyn	Mr. John Davies
Sir William Kingston	Mr. J. B. Fuller
Mark Smeaton	Mr. R. Struthers
Magistrate	Mr. C. Pierson
Officer	Mr. J. Taylor
Servant	Mr. G. Connor
Page	Miss Grace Durall
Lady Jane Seymour	Lillian Conway
Mauge	Miss Jennie Gourlay

Nobles, Courtiers, Ladies, Guards, Pages.

The first act opens with a scene in the King's palace, where Anne Boleyn is a member of the Court. The opening dialogue is between Cromwell and Wolsey, and turns upon the divorce from Queen Catherine and Wolsey's determination that the King shall marry Marguerite of France. The time is the moment when the Cardinal is waiting for a report of the action of the bishops on the King's appeal to their assent to Wareham's proposition that she is not legally his wife. Lord Percy brings the Cardinal word in regard to the affair, and while communicating it he sees Anne in the distance. He is much smitten with her charms, but Wolsey orders him to retire, and he has no opportunity of communicating with her. Then follows a scene between Wolsey and Cromwell, in which the Cardinal talks of making her the plaything of the King, and then a scene between Percy and Norreys, in which the former speaks of his love for Anne and his determination to win her. He says he has written her, but they are strangely kept apart, and that he has had no answer from her. As they retire both the King and Anne enter, and there is a short scene of gallantry and compliment, after which Anne retires and Wolsey urges her charms upon the King, saying insidiously that to a king "a woman is a woman." As they go off Anne enters with Percy's letter in her hands, whereupon the young lord opportunely comes upon her and sees in her conduct the evidences of her love for him. They embrace, and the curtain falls upon a very effective love tableau.

THE SECOND ACT.

The second act, like the first, is only introductory. It is in three scenes, the first being an interior in the King's palace. It is very short, and is for the purpose of despatching Smeaton with a letter to the Bishop of Bayonne and showing the determination of the Cardinal in pursuing his purposes. The second scene is in Sir Thomas Boleyn's garden. Six months have elapsed since the first act. Smeaton, who was one of Sir Thomas' musicians, is there, with the package to the Bishop, and Sir Thomas asks his daughter to encourage Smeaton's pretensions, because Smeaton is a spy on the Cardinal and he is anxious to obtain the Cardinal's secrets. She is not disposed to do this, but as Percy then arrives and upbraids her for renouncing him she discovers Wolsey's perfidy, and in the end consents, being determined to ruin the prelate. Percy tells her that his father, the Duke of Northumberland, had been ordered to carry out the marriage contract with Lady Mary Talbot when he was a child, and shows her the letter giving him back his troth. She points out to him that the letter is a forgery of the Cardinal's and they embrace, but only to part immediately, as Percy tells her he has already married the Lady Mary. It is then she swears vengeance against the Cardinal and returns to Court. In the third scene the King welcomes her back. She has a violent quarrel with Wolsey and thereupon she denounces him to the King, showing Wolsey's letter to the Bishop of Bayonne. The curtain falls on the downfall of the Cardinal and Wolsey disappears from the play.

THE THIRD AND FOURTH ACTS.

Seven years elapse between the second and third acts. The scene is at the King's palace and it is made picturesque by a tournament outside. The third act opens with the scheming of Cromwell and Lady Jane Seymour for the crown and closes with the accusation of high treason against the Queen. It is purely an acting act and shows the scheming of Cromwell, the cold and cruel ambition of Jane, the unsuspecting trust of Anne and the base passions of the King. The first scene of the fourth act is the fusion scene. Anna is dressed for execution and the block is in her room. This idea is Miss Dickinson's, and is made to play a very important part in the business. There is a scene preceding this which opens with a dialogue between Sir William Kingston, her jailer, and a magistrate, in regard to her trial and the feelings of the people in her favor. Then follows a scene between Cromwell and Kingston about a plot to admit Percy to the cell in order to tempt her to try to escape. After this she is discovered alone with the block, and then comes the following remarkable soliloquy:—

Will the night never end? Oh! my God! I have done penance for the sins of my whole life, were it a long and wicked one. I have died a million deaths in the presence of that—(points to block). No! no! no! I will not look at it—I will not see it. It is not there. This is my royal apartment in the tower; this my chair of state, this my crown. I am Queen of England. What have I to do with blocks and scaffolds and executions? (Stumbles against the block.) Oh! a great sea of upturned faces! (Attempts to put her head on the block.) No! no! Die! I to die! It cannot be. It is impossible. Why, I am well. I am strong. I am full of splendid vigor. The life thrills to my hair and finger ends. The blood throbs in my veins and thunders here—(strikes her heart). People die of disease, of blight, of decay—aye, and of a dagger's thrust and a sword's stroke. Hate kills. Remorse kills not, or my blood would strangle them in their marriage wine. Their marriage wine! My child, my child! The little one, Elizabeth! my baby, my baby, what is to become of you? The morning begins to break the last sunrise these eyes shall ever behold on earth. This day I am going to die! This morning here; my soul, my soul, this evening—where? Oh! merciful Lord God, open to me when I knock, receive when I would enter in!

After this speech Percy is introduced into her cell and entreats her to fly with him. She does not deny her love for him, but in language as impassioned and as terse and vigorous as her soliloquies she resists his imploring words because she is a wife and a mother, and, the attempts to procure a confession from her having failed, she is led to execution as the curtain falls.

THE DRAMA AS AN ACTING PLAY.

In the drama which Miss Dickinson has given the rather meaningless title of "A Crown of Thorns" she has not attempted to shine by her literary excellence. It is essentially an acting play, and if it fails to keep the stage it will disappear altogether. It is "Liney" from beginning to end, and entirely free from what actors call "talky-talky." The speech I have sent you is the longest in the piece, and there are few others of any considerable length. With the exception of Percy, there is not an agreeable part in the play. Wolsey is scheming for the Papal chair for himself, and to further his designs he is anxious to sacrifice Anne to the guilty love of the King, but to prevent her marriage. It is for this that he intrigues with the Bishop of Bayonne and craftily compels the marriage of Lord Percy to Lady Mary Talbot. Cromwell is his confederate, and, after his fall, the promoter of the schemes of Lady Jane Seymour to destroy Anne Boleyn and clutch the crown. Lady Jane is simply odious. The King is nowhere presented in a strong light, and even the part of Annie is a mere sketch in the prompter's book. She is not painted as a good woman, but as an ambitious girl and a wronged queen. If there is any purpose in the play it is to show her in the light of a virtuous wife; but even this can only appear from the acting and not from the book. All the other characters are equally sketchy, but exceedingly plastic, and capable of strong delineation in the hands of good actors. Few plays depend more completely upon the cast for their success, but before I speak of this or of the acting of the heroine I wish to note particularly Miss Dickinson's method of dressing as Anne Boleyn.

THE HEROINE'S FOUR DRESSES.

All of the dresses were devised by Miss Dickinson, and they are queenly in richness and elaborate in detail, as well as historically correct. They are four in number, one for each act, and were not made in Paris, as has been reported, but by her own dressmaker in New York and under her direction. The cost of the outfit was $9,000, exclusive of diamonds and ornaments. As Anne Boleyn is supposed just to have returned from France, some license is allowed for French taste. Miss Dickinson wears a gold-blonde wig, and displays her costumes with exquisite taste. There is a marvel of feminine art in her exhibition of her queenly robes, as act after act brings them before the public eye. The first is the court dress Anne Boleyn may be said to have worn when the admiring eyes of King Henry were attracted by the girlish beauty. It is a creamy brocade, with ruby velvet trimmings and gold embroidery. This robe is bewildering in its blended beauty, and it is as exquisite for harmony as for elaborateness. The second is a dress supposed to be worn at the home of her father, Sir Thomas Boleyn. It is a Metternich green satin, with a crimson and cloth of gold overdress of the Venetian style, and it may be described as unique and piquant, with a subtle suggestion of the ante-renaissance period. The third dress is a marvel of brocaded beauty as is fitting for the royal robes of an English queen. It is of the azure of an unclouded sky, and it is made more queenly by a train of blue velvet and ermine and a girdle of diamonds and pearls, with a diamond crown and necklace. The stomacher is of woven pearls and old lace. The last dress is not the traditional black velvet in which queens are supposed to be led to the block. It is sombre, but full of a passionate suggestion of intense and smothered fire, typified by a blending of black and crimson satin under rich black lace. It is such a dress that a queen might almost wish to die at the hands of the executioner that she might be able to wear it; and this brings us the rising of the curtain.

The prompter's bell has sounded. The orchestra are in their places and the overture has been rendered. In a moment more the mimic scene will begin. All around is "a sea of upturned faces," which Miss Dickinson's imagination in the last act may convert into those of the witnesses of her execution, to which Anne Boleyn refers in the soliloquy I have quoted.

THE RISING OF THE CURTAIN.

Precisely at eight o'clock the curtain rose. Cromwell and Wolsey took the stage, and with words of learned length and thundering sound the play began. This was in itself a bad omen for the aspiring debutante, for if her endeavors were to be moulded upon theirs, it was plain enough that good fortune was beyond her grasp. To ascertain this and to satisfy their curiosity in regard to her daring venture, the immense audience waited patiently for Miss Dickinson's entrance. At last she came, reading as she walked. The King was approaching from the other side, and in a moment she would be required to utter her first line. When the King spoke she answered, but showed embarrassment not so much as constraint. There was no flexibility in her voice, her attitude or her manner. She was frightened; but her awkward interview with the King was not altogether the result of fright, as was afterward more particularly shown in her manner of reading the love letter from Percy. Instead of being as light as a bird and as bright as a morning in June during this delicious episode, she behaved as if she were delivering a woman's suffrage address, and where she calls him her darling, instead of whispering the words in a way to show her joyful emotions, she fairly bellowed. As there was nothing but an embrace afterward to close the act, the effective tableau at the end was, consequently, only an absurdity. When the curtain fell she was recalled, but there was no real enthusiasm, and the favor with which she was received continued to diminish as the play progressed. In the second act she showed some tragic force, but the lack of stage training was even more painfully apparent than in the first. She walked the boards with difficulty, and every step was proof that it will still be many days before she has learned the rudiments of her new calling. Her interview with her father was spiritless and stiff, and her reception of her lover awkward and ineffective. She, however, resented his imputations that she had played the wanton with the King with genuine feeling; but the reconciliation was clumsy, and the same remark applies to her threats of vengeance against the Cardinal. Her exposure of Woolsey, which closes the act, was pretentious, but not strong.

In the scene with Lady Jane Seymour, in the third act, the keynote of which was, "I did grasp a throne," she delivered another woman's suffrage lecture. Even Miss Lilian Conway as Lady Jane had the advantage of her in ease and grace. The subsequent scenes, which in the prompting book are very strong were very weak on the stage, and Miss Dickinson's shrill and hollow voice and her platform tones did more to kill them than anything else. The arrest at the end, which ought to be very effective, was feebly done, but the stage manager must take the responsibility for this. Throughout, the support was not good, and seemed designed to hurt rather than to help her.

A REDEEMING EFFORT.

In the prison scene in the last act Miss Dickinson went far to redeem herself. Barring the natural disadvantages of a voice spoiled by platform speaking, the soliloquy was finely delivered. She had the stage to herself, and consequently was more completely mistress of her actions than in the scenes which preceded. Her refusal to accede to Lord Percy's suggestions of flight was also a bit of very good acting, and was very warmly applauded. If she had shown as much capacity in the scenes which preceded it there would at least be some promise of a career for her in the future. The obstacle is a complete lack of light comedy powers and the exhibition of too much sombreness in the heavy scenes.

Miss Dickinson has written a very good play, and it is to be regretted that she also undertook to act in it. In the hands of a competent actress it could not fail to have a brilliant run, especially if the action were made more consecutive in the opening act. The play was splendidly mounted, and in most respects its production was highly creditable to the management of the Globe.

EXTRADITION.

The Note of Secretary Fish, of March 31, on the Winslow Case.

DETAILS OF THE LAWRENCE CASE.

Can the Terms of a Solemn Treaty Be Changed by Legislative Enactment?

A NEW CLAIM BY GREAT BRITAIN.

Winslow's Surrender Demanded Without Conditions.

WASHINGTON, May 8, 1876.

The following is the letter of Secretary Fish in the Winslow extradition case, which our Chargé d'Affaires at London was directed to present to the attention of Lord Derby. The reply of the British Minister has not yet been received:—

[No. 864.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, March 31, 1876.

WICKHAM HOFFMAN, Esq., &c., &c., &c.:—

SIR—Referring to previous correspondence in reference to the extradition of Winslow, in custody in London, I have now to acknowledge the receipt of yours, No. 39, under date of March 10, enclosing a note addressed to you by Lord Derby, of March 8, and your reply of the same day. With General Schenck's No. 884 was enclosed a note from Lord Derby, dated February 29, in which it was stated that Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department had drawn attention to subsection 2 of the third section of the British Extradition act of 1870, and feared that the claim by this government of the right to try Lawrence (who had been recently surrendered) for crimes other than that for which he had been extradited, amounts to a denial that any such law as is referred to in the British act exists; and the disclaimer of this government of the existence of any implied understanding in respect to trial for crimes other than extradition crimes, together with the interpretation put upon the act of Congress of August 12, 1842 (which is, doubtless, an error for 1848), preclude any longer the belief in the existence of an effective arrangement, which Her Majesty's government had previously supposed to be practically in force, and it was added that the Secretary of the Home Department was compelled to state that if he were correct in considering that no such law exists, he would have no power, in the absence of an arrangement, to order the extradition of Winslow, even although proper proceedings had been taken for that purpose.

Lord Derby called General Schenck's attention to the intimation which he had received from the Home Department, and requested that the matter be brought to the knowledge of this government. It is to be remarked, however, that in this note the Foreign Office, as distinguished from the Home Office, expressed no opinion on the question involved, but confined itself to requesting that the views of the Home Office might be communicated to this government. A few days later, however, on the 8th of March, Lord Derby assumes the more advanced position previously occupied only by the Home Department and writes as follows:—

> Her Majesty's government do not feel themselves justified in authorizing the surrender of Winslow until they shall have received the assurance of your government that this person shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to Her Majesty's dominions, be detained or tried in the United States for any offence committed prior to his surrender other than the extradition crimes proved by the facts on which the surrender would be grounded; and requesting that this decision be communicated to this government.

To this note you made reply under date of March 8, referring to the general practice for many years under the treaty, and calling attention to the construction given to the twenty-seventh section of the act of 1870 in the case of Bonnier. No further correspondence has reached this government, and the matter rests upon this note of Lord Derby and your reply.

THE REASONS GIVEN

by Lord Derby for the course intimated in his note arise, as he states, from what had taken place in this country in the Lawrence case, and the positive terms of section 3, subsection 2, of the British Extradition act of 1870. Moreover, it has been stated that the Home Office had even gone further, and expressed the opinion that, not only had some implied understanding been reached as to the particular crime for which Lawrence should be tried, and that it would be in violation of the laws of the United States and of the general laws of extradition of all countries, to try any prisoner for any other crime than the particular extradition offence for which he had been surrendered.

With regard to any such understanding, either expressed or implied by any authorized declaration or engagement of this government, no evidence is adduced, nor can be adduced. This government asked the surrender of Lawrence precisely as it has asked the surrender of all other fugitives who have been delivered by Great Britain under the treaty of 1842, complying on its part with the requirements of the treaty, and neither by expression nor by implication entering into any "arrangement," but simply requiring the fugitive to be "delivered up to justice." It furnished such evidence of criminality as according to the laws of Great Britain where the fugitive was found would have justified his apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime or offence had been there committed. Great Britain recognized the compliance by this government with all that the treaty required, and delivered the fugitive up to justice. The allusion made by the Home Office to the case of Lawrence needs possibly a passing remark.

THE LAWRENCE CASE.

Charles L. Lawrence is charged with a series of forgeries whereby the government of the United States claims to have been defrauded to an amount not far short of $2,000,000 on Custom House entries. He is supposed to have numerous and influential confederates, both in this country and in England, who are suspected of having shared in the spoils resulting from these alleged frauds upon this government. A large number of indictments have been found against Lawrence, and proceedings either civil or criminal are either pending or imminent against supposed accomplices. It is supposed that prosecution of these cases might possibly disclose names on either side of the Atlantic in connection with the alleged frauds not yet brought before the public. In the spring of 1875 Lawrence fled and escaped to Europe, and was arrested under the assumed name of Gordon, at Queenstown, on a requisition for his surrender under the treaty. There were proved (as I am informed) before Sir Thomas Henry, in London, twelve or thirteen distinct charges of forgery, each on papers connected with a different invoice of goods. The representatives of this government supposed the extradition was made on all the charges, but the letter or report of Sir Thomas Henry to the British Home Office led to the issue of a warrant of surrender of Lawrence on a single charge of forging a bond and affidavit, on which warrant the keeper of the jail delivered Lawrence to the agent appointed by the President to receive him. The terms of the warrant were not known to any agent or officer of this government (as is represented to me) until long after Lawrence's return to the United States. His counsel and friends appear to have been apprised of the fact that, although proof was presented on some twelve or thirteen charges of forgery, the warrant of surrender seems to be confined to the forging a bond and affidavit. Up to this date Lawrence has been arraigned only upon one indictment based on the forgery of the bond and affidavit mentioned in Sir Thomas Henry's report to the Home Office, and he has not been arraigned for any offence other than the extradition crimes proved by the facts in evidence before Sir Thomas Henry and on which his surrender was based.

Although not arraigned on any other indictment than for the forgery for which he was extradited, the British Home Office has raised the question that he may possibly be tried upon other charges and for other crimes. It seems, therefore, that the Home Office of Great Britain undertakes to decide what is the law of the United States, as well as of Great Britain, and assumes that the law of the United States, as well as the general law of extradition and the Extradition act of Great Britain, prevent the trial of a criminal surrendered under the treaty of 1842 for any offence other than the particular offence for which he was extradited, and the position which it takes involves the assumption that, in demanding an extradition under the treaty, the United States is bound by the provisions of the act of 1870, whether in conflict with the treaty or not, and it claims to have "supposed" that an "effective arrangement was in force," that no criminal so surrendered should be tried for any other than the particular extradition offence, on the faith of which arrangement it is claimed that surrenders have heretofore been made and without which it is now said that a surrender would not be possible under the English act; but, as already said, nothing is adduced in support of the belief of the existence of such supposed arrangement. These positions are so different from the understanding of this government and so opposed to the views which it was supposed were entertained by Great Britain, and which have been recorded in Parliamentary papers, which have been asserted in diplomatic correspondence and been recognized in judicial decisions in that as in this country and set forth by writers on extradition law, that I learn from Lord Derby's note with surprise, equal to my regret, that they appear to be supported by the Foreign Office.

THE ACT OF AUGUST 12, 1848

reproduced in the Revised Statutes (Section 5,270 to 5,276) referred to in the correspondence, does not affect or limit the rights of the two governments on the question. This act is simply a general act for carrying into effect treaties of extradition. It provides the machinery, and prescribes the general mode of procedure, but does not assume to determine the rights of the United States, or of any other state, which are governed wholly by the particular provisions of the several treaties, nor to limit or construe any particular treaty. In some few treaties between the United States and foreign countries provisions exist that the criminal shall not be tried for offences committed prior to extradition other than the extradition crime, and in others no such provision is included.

Again, under some treaties the citizens or subjects of the contracting powers are reciprocally exempt from being surrendered, while others contain no such exception.

The United States act of 1848 is equally applicable to all these different treaties. If the surrendered fugitive is to find immunity from trial for other than the offence named in the warrant of extradition, he must find such immunity guaranteed to him by the terms of the treaty, not in the act of Congress. The treaties which contain the immunity from trial for other offences have been celebrated since the date of the act of 1848. At that date the United States had treaties of extradition only with Great Britain and with France, neither of which contained the limitation referred to.

The terms of the respective treaties alone define or can limit the rights of the contracting parties.

The construction of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain by the two governments, and their practice in its enforcement for many years, were in entire harmony. In each country surrendered fugitives have been tried for other offences than those for which they had been delivered, the rule having been that where the criminal was reclaimed in good faith and the proceeding was not an excuse or pretence to bring him within the jurisdiction of the court, it was no violation of the treaty or of good faith to proceed against him on other charges than the particular one on which he had been surrendered. The judicial decisions of both countries affirm this rule. It was so held in a case of inter-State extradition by Judge Nelson in Williams vs. Bacon, 10 Wendell, 636, and the same principle was laid down by the Court of Appeals of New York in a late case of Adriance vs. Lagrave, who had been delivered up under the treaty with France. In United States vs. Caldwell (8 Blatchford Cir. Ct. Rp., 131) Caldwell, after extradition from Canada for forgery, in 1871, was indicted for bribing an officer, and the plea was entered that the prisoner was brought within the jurisdiction of the court upon a charge of forgery, under the treaty, and that the offence specified in the indictment was not mentioned in the treaty. A demurrer being interposed, the Court decided the prisoner had been extradited in good faith, charged with the commission of a crime, and must be tried.

In the case of Burley, extradited from Canada on a charge of robbery, the prisoner was tried on assault with intent to kill.

In the case of Heilbrunn, who was extradited from this country for forgery, and tried in Great Britain for larceny, the facts, as stated by the Solicitor General of Great Britain, who had charge of the proceedings, and who was examined before the late British Commissioner on the extradition question, were that the prisoner, being extradited for forgery, was acquitted, and was thereupon tried and convicted for larceny, for which he could not have been surrendered, not being enumerated in the list of crimes mentioned in the treaty.

In Canada there is the same current of authority. In the case of Von E. Arnam (Upper Canada Reports, 4 C. P., 288), the prisoner was surrendered by the United States to Canada upon the charge of forgery, and application was made for release on bail, on the ground that the offence was at most the obtaining of money under false pretences and not within the treaty. Macauley, Chief Justice, said, in denying the motion, that he was disposed to regard the offence as forgery, but even if the offence were only false pretences, "after being in custody, he is liable to be prosecuted for any offence which the facts may support."

In Paxton's case (10 Lower Canada Jurist, 212, 11, 352), the prisoner was charged with uttering a forged promissory note. He pleaded that he had been extradited upon the charge of forgery, and could not be tried for uttering forged paper or for any other than the extradition offence. The Court decided that the trial should proceed. The prisoner thereupon protested against being called upon to plead to any other charge than that for which he was extradited, but he was tried, found guilty and the conviction affirmed on appeal.

In addition to the foregoing, Judge Benedict, in his opinion in Lawrence's case, delivered within a few days past, entirely coincides in these views, and the Solicitor General of the United States, in his opinion in Lawrence's case, dated July 16, 1875, reaches the same conclusions.

An examination of the report of the Select Committee on Extradition of the House of Commons, which sat in 1868, under whose superintendence the extradition law of 1870 was framed, and which was composed of some of the most distinguished public men of Great Britain, among whom were the Solicitor General, Mr. Mill, Mr. Forster, Sir Robert Collier and Mr. Bonnerie, shows that the law of the United States and the practice in regard to extradition were perfectly well understood, and they are distinctly referred to on several occasions.

Mr. Hammond, now Lord Hammond, for many years Under Secretary of State, in speaking of Burley's case, stated that as it was suggested that the prisoner, who had been surrendered on a charge of robbery, was about to be tried for piracy the matter had been referred to law officers of the Crown, and that it was held that if the United States put him bona fide on his trial for the offence for which he was extradited it would be difficult to question their right to try him for piracy or any other offence of which he might be accused, whether such offence was or was not a ground of extradition or even within the treaty, and added:—"We admit in this country that if a man is bona fide tried for an offence for which he was given up there is nothing to prevent his being subsequently tried for another offence, either antecedently committed or not." (Answer 1,036.)

Mr. Mullens, an eminent member of the bar, who was counsel in the Lawrence case, in reply to a question of Sir Robert Collier, said that, in his opinion, a surrendered criminal ought to be tried for an offence other than the extradition offence arising from the same facts; and Mr. Forster (question 1,214), considering the propriety of the proposed stipulation that a person should be tried for no offence other than the extradition offence, said:—

> The Americans do not make that stipulation, or else you would not have been able to try Heilbrunn for any other offence.

To which Mr. Mullens responded:—

> No; there is no stipulation of that kind in the case of America.

Mr. Mill thereupon said (question 1,216):—"As I understand it, the treaty with America would not prevent our trying a man for a different offence from that for which he had been given up." To which Mr. Mullens replied:—"It would not; there is no stipulation that he shall not be tried for any other offence." Then follows question 1,217:—"Would you wish to extend that state of things to other countries?" and the reply, "with regard to America I have never found any difficulty about it," &c.

So far as can be ascertained there was absolutely no dissent at any time from these views as to the law and practice under the treaty, and the only question seemed to be whether it was wise to attempt to change them.

Mr. Clark (an eminent British authority), in his treatise on extradition, says:—

> It is quite clear that neither the treaty nor the law of the United States contains the provisions of the extradition act of 1870.

CONCLUSIONS.

It would appear, therefore, by the judicial decisions, by the practice of both governments, and by the understanding of the persons most familiar with proceedings in such cases, and the most competent to judge, that where a criminal has been in good faith extradited for an offence within the treaty, there is no agreement, expressed or implied, that he may not also be tried for another offence, of which he is charged, although not an extradition offence. He is in fact (in accordance with the language of the treaty) "delivered up to justice;" and in the absence of any limitation by treaty, to "justice" generally, each independent State being the judge of its own administration of justice. Surely Great Britain will not allow the Legislature of another State to prescribe or to limit the cases or the manner in which justice is to be administered in her courts, and she will not expect the United States to be less tenacious of its independence in this regard. Now for the first time since the signing of the treaty of 1842 Great Britain raises the question of her right to demand from the United States, as a condition of the execution by Great Britain of her engagement to surrender a fugitive criminal charged with a series of stupendous forgeries, a stipulation, or agreement not provided for in the treaty, but asked on the ground of an act of Parliament passed some twenty-eight years after the treaty had been in force, and prescribes it as one of the rules or conditions which should apply to arrangements for extradition when made with a foreign State. This involves the question whether one of the parties to a treaty can change and alter its terms or construction, or attach new conditions to its execution, without the assent of the other—whether an act of the Parliament of Great Britain, passed in the year 1870, can change the spirit or terms of a treaty with the United States of nearly thirty years anterior date, or can attach a new condition to be demanded of the United States before compliance by Her Majesty's government with the terms of the treaty as they have been shown to have been uniformly understood and executed by both governments for the third of a century.

As this government does not recognize any efficacy in a British statute to alter or modify or to attach new conditions to the executory parts of a previously existing treaty between the United States and Great Britain, I do not feel called upon to examine particularly the provisions of the law of 1870. But inasmuch as Great Britain seeks to impose the provisions of that act upon the United States in the execution of a treaty of many years' anterior date, I do not fail to observe that while by the act Great Britain assumes to require that no surrendered fugitive shall be tried in the country which demands his extradition for "any offence other than the extradition crime" (in the singular) proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded, she reserves to herself the right to try a fugitive surrendered to her for such crimes (in the plural) as may be proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded. This does not seem to be wholly reciprocal, and if the United States were disposed to enter into a treaty under this act, it might expect some greater equality of right than a cursory examination of this provision in the act seems to provide. It is quite well known that after the passage of the act of 1870 an effort was made to enter into a treaty with Great Britain, which should enlarge the number of extradition offences and otherwise extend the provisions of the existing treaty. At the outset it was apparent that the act of 1870 was not an act to carry into effect treaties or conventions for extradition, as is the United States' act of 1848, but one providing a system to which all subsequent treaties of extradition must be adopted and which could be applied to enforce treaties or arrangements made subject to its provisions. This government was unable to agree to any arrangements based on the provisions of the act of 1870, and in a note addressed to Sir Edward Thornton, the British Minister, under date of January 27, 1871, he was informed that

> This government understands the twenty-seventh section of the extradition act of 1870 as giving continued effect to the existing engagements for the surrender of criminals. Imperfect as they are, in view of the long coterminous frontier between British North America and the United States, we must be content to suffer the inconveniences until Parliament shall put it in the power of Her Majesty's government to propose a more comprehensive and acceptable arrangement.

The British government was thus distinctly and formally advised of the position and of the views of the United States, and no exception thereto has been expressed. A further effort to effect a treaty was made in 1873, after the passage by the British Parliament of an act amending the act of 1870, which resulted in failure for precisely similar reasons.

This failure to negotiate a new treaty arose solely because the United States could not accept as part of it some of the provisions of the act of 1870, and preferred to go on under the treaty of 1842 as theretofore construed and practically carried into effect by each government, and thus we have proceeded up to the present time.

In support of the construction which this government in 1871, in the note to Sir Edward Thornton above referred to, gave to the twenty-seventh section of the extradition act, it appears that when the Court of Queen's Bench was called to pass upon the very question in the case of Bonnier (27 Law Times, N. S., 844) the Attorney General stated that the intention had been to make a general act which should apply to all cases except where there was anything inconsistent with the treaties referred to. So far as the point was passed on, the Lord Chief Justice expressed the opinion that it was the intention while getting rid of the statutes by which the former treaties were carried out, at the same time to save those treaties in their full integrity and force, and that the result had been accomplished. One of the other justices thought the question somewhat doubtful, and the third agreed with the Chief Justice.

The Solicitor General of the United States, in his opinion in Lawrence's case, given in August of last year, reached the same conclusion, that the treaty was not affected by the act. It cannot readily be believed that Parliament intended by the act of 1870 to claim the right to alter treaties in existence without notice to the other government, or to impose new conditions upon foreign governments seeking extradition under treaties in existence prior to that act.

The United States has declined to become subject to the British act of 1870, and with knowledge of this the government of Great Britain has continued constantly to ask and obtain extraditions under the treaty of 1842, and since the refusal of the United States to negotiate a new treaty under the provisions of that act. Since the passage of the act of 1870 Great Britain has obtained from this government some thirteen warrants of extradition and has instituted a much larger number of proceedings to obtain extradition. In no instance has Great Britain thought it necessary to tender any such stipulation as she now asks from the United States, or to present her requests for extradition in any way different from that in which they were presented prior to 1870. The United States in the same time have instituted numerous proceedings, and at this moment have three criminals in London in custody upon charges of forgery, whose extradition this government is seeking in the usual manner provided by the treaty.

During this period no intimation has reached this government that the treaty of 1842 was not in full force, or that the act of 1870 was claimed to limit its operation, or to impose upon this government the necessity either of changing its laws or of giving stipulations not known to the provisions of the treaty, and not heretofore suggested, nor has any representation been made to this government by that of Great Britain on account of any proceedings taken in the case of Lawrence, mentioned in the opinion attributed to the Home Office in the note of Lord Derby to General Schenck, before referred to.

But now with three important cases pending in London at the present time for extradition, in one of which at least all the formalities have been complied with, we are informed in substance that it had been supposed up to the present time by the British Home Office that our law as to trials for other than extradition offences was in agreement with the law of 1870, but finding it to be otherwise, we are confronted with the requirement of a stipulation in order to obtain what is guaranteed by the treaty of 1842, whereby the United States must recognize the right of the British Parliament by statute to change existing executory treaties and to impose upon this government conditions and stipulations to which it had not given its assent. As relates to the particular there is not, so far as I am aware, any intention of trying him for any offences other than those on which indictments were transmitted and for which his surrender was demanded, but the United States will give no stipulation of which the treaty does not authorize the demand.

As the stipulation or condition is demanded by Great Britain as a right, the right of the demand must be established.

The President regrets that a condition, which, in his judgment, is without any justification under the treaty, should have been asked. He regards the question thus presented as of a grave and serious character, on the final solution of which must probably depend the continuance of the extradition article of the treaty of 1842. He cannot recognize the right of any other Power to change at its pleasure, and without the assent of the United States, the terms and conditions of an executory agreement in a treaty solemnly ratified between the United States and that Power. He thinks that the twenty-seventh section of the British act of 1870 was specially intended to exempt the treaty with the United States from the application of any of the new conditions or provisions embodied in that act, and to leave that treaty to be construed and the surrender of fugitives thereunder to be made as had been previously done. He hopes that on a further consideration Her Majesty's government will see, in the section referred to, the effect which he supposes it was designed to have.

But he recognizes that it is for the British government to construe and enforce its own statutes; and should Her Majesty's government finally conclude that the British Parliament has attached a new condition to the compliance by that government of its engagement with the United States under the tenth article of the treaty of 1842, relating to extraditions, requiring from the United States stipulations not provided for or contemplated in the treaty, he will deeply regret the necessity which will thereby be imposed upon him, and does not see how he can avoid regarding the refusal by Great Britain to adhere to the provisions of the treaty as they have been reciprocally understood and construed from its date to the present time, or the exaction by that government of a condition heretofore unknown, as the infraction and termination of that provision of the treaty.

You are not authorized to enter into any stipulation or understanding as to the trial of Winslow, in case he be delivered up to justice. His surrender is asked under and in accordance with the provisions of the tenth article of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain of the 9th of August, 1842. He is charged with a crime included within the list of crimes enumerated in the treaty, that crime was committed within the jurisdiction of the United States and he has sought an asylum and been found within the territories of Great Britain, and the United States have produced such evidences of criminality as, according to the law of Great Britain, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime or offence had been committed in Great Britain.

You will communicate the substance of this to Lord Derby, and should he desire it you may read it to him.

I am, sir, your obedient servant, HAMILTON FISH.

IMPEACHMENT.

CONCLUSION OF THE ARGUMENTS ON THE QUESTION OF JURISDICTION—MANAGER KNOTT ON THE DUTIES OF THE SENATE—CLOSING SPEECH OF JERE. BLACK ON THE PART OF THE DEFENCE—ORDERS OF THE COURT OF IMPEACHMENT.

WASHINGTON, May 8, 1876.

At eleven o'clock the Chair announced that the Senate sitting in trial for the impeachment of W. W. Belknap would resume its session, in accordance with the order of Saturday last.

Proclamation having been made by the Sergeant-at-Arms, and but few Senators being present, Mr. Merrimon, of North Carolina, moved a call of the Senate, when thirty-nine Senators responded. The proceedings of Saturday's session were read. The respondent, with his counsel, Messrs. Carpenter, Black and Blair, and the Board of Managers being present, Mr. Manager Knott resumed and completed his argument commenced on Friday. He said the line of argument which he had proposed for himself had been so completely covered by his colleagues that little had been left for him to say, except, perhaps, to recapitulate some of the points and to elaborate to some extent a few of the suggestions so very ably presented by them, which he proceeded to do, concluding as follows:—

I am content to leave the question with you, perfectly confident that no large number of right minded people will accuse the House of Representatives of being composed of either fools or traitors for sending it here, or denounce you for cowardice or corruption, decide how you will. Whatever your decision may be I am satisfied it will be such as to redound to your own credit as jurists and statesman, as well as to the permanent good of our common country. For

I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech
To stir men's blood.

ARGUMENT OF MR. BLACK.

Mr. Black closed the argument on the part of the defence. He drew the distinction which existed between this case, where the accused was not in office at the time the House of Representatives took cognizance of it, and the case of an official resigning after that point of time. The real point at issue was whether a man who had resigned his office was to be still accounted a public officer for all the purposes of impeachment. On that proposition he held the negative and would maintain it if he was able. In discussing the legal point he alluded to the speech of Manager Hoar on Saturday last as the most elaborate and carefully prepared oration that he had ever had the good fortune to listen to and admire. It had, however, he said, been filled with the fiercest and bitterest abuse of the accused, as well as of other persons absent and undefended. He (Mr. Black) could not have any objections to that gentleman playing the part of Cicero in this proceeding; but he protested that he had no right to make an imaginary Marc Antony out of General Belknap for the mere purpose of having a subject for his philippic. He had not only charged General Belknap as if he were guilty of everything which the managers had seen proper to set forth in their articles of impeachment, but he had gone out of his way and charged that the whole country was so full of corruption that it had become a byword and a disgrace all over the world. According to his account, "it would be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah," than for those cities of the plain, whose wickedness he had been impeaching. Like Lot, his righteous zeal had been vexed from day to day by these iniquities. According to him all classes of this country were weltering together in one great mass of moral putrefaction. He had treated the arguments made for the defence on this question of law as but the jeers and sophistries of the criminal lawyer. If the gentleman were a criminal lawyer (as he supposed from his sneer he was not), or if he were any lawyer at all and went into a court of ordinary jurisdiction, and on the pretence of arguing a simple question of law attacked the opposite party with bitter abuse (unfounded on any fact), and then extended his attack to everybody to whom he could lay the rough side of his tongue, he would be gently reminded that he was travelling out of record, and if necessary would be brought back to the point with a rather sharp turn.

Judge Black then commented at length upon the argument of Mr. Hoar and the quotations which that gentleman made from John Quincy Adams, and said Mr. Adams was the least reliable man who ever lived on a question of law; that he was always ready for a personal controversy; that his bump of combativeness was always in a state of chronic inflammation and that he enjoyed nothing so much as the "rapture of the strife." He next referred to the remarks of Mr. Hoar, made in the House of Representatives when the articles of impeachment were presented, to the effect that the House had no power to impeach and the Senate no jurisdiction to try the accused, and said of course that gentleman (Mr. Hoar) had a right to change his opinion. No man was bound to live and abide by an opinion which he might have about a question like this when first presented to his mind, and no one had a right to say that the change was not a conscientious one or that the gentleman professed now an opinion which he did not honestly and seriously entertain. It was true that the change had occurred under circumstances of excitement and political terror not very conducive to the formation of a sound judgment. The gentleman had been surrounded by and animosity. Paley was right when he said that he must be either more or less than man who refused to kindle in the general blaze. It was some honor to the gentleman (Mr. Hoar) that he was the last one to take fire—(laughter)—although when he did begin he proved to be rather more combustible than any of the rest. (Loud laughter in the galleries, which the Chair promptly suppressed.)

Mr. BLACK contended that the House of Representatives could not throw its drag net over the whole nation and draw in every man, whether a public officer or private citizen. He denied the doctrine asserted by the managers, that a man once in office was always an officer. He quoted from Rawle, Sargent and Story on the constitution in support of his views, and said several great political revolutions had occurred in this country when the party previously occupying the seat of power had been driven out with the wrath of their victorious enemies burning after them. The victors, as they came in, were not sparing of their charges; treason, corruption and crimes and other misdemeanors were talked about. Yet it did not appear that it had ever entered into the head of any human being to suppose that the party coming in and having power in all the branches of the government could subject their displaced opponents to the power of impeachment. Referring to he said it was acknowledged that in England the power of Parliament was omnipotent, and for that very reason there was no resemblance except in name of the thing between impeachment in that country and in this. The omnipotence of Parliament reached to every subject of the realm. Now, in the most ordinary times it might take for its victim a peer or a commoner, a prince or a peasant, priest or layman, freeholder, merchant, mechanic, any one; they were not restricted by any law to political cases. Parliament could hang and quarter a man, imprison for life, and fine him to the extent of his whole estate. He next spoke of the power of Congress under our constitution and claimed that the resignation of Belknap was legal, and the Senate had no right to go behind it. Referring to the alleged threat of Mr. Clymer, that unless Mr. Belknap resigned he would be impeached, Mr. Black said the chairman of the Committee on War Expenditures gave notice, either directly to General Belknap or mediately to him through his counsel, that, if he did not retire from office before twelve o'clock on March 2 he would at that hour be impeached, and in consequence of that, to avoid this threatened impeachment, General Belknap did take his resignation to the President at half-past ten A. M. and got the President's acceptance of it by twelve o'clock. The time when the House met the office had been declared vacant, and another person had been appointed and was exercising the powers of it as its head. The defence did not claim that this was a compact with the chairman of the committee. Mr. Clymer had no right to speak for the House, but General Belknap knew that he was a leading member of the House, and that what he proposed to do was very likely to be accomplished. He argued that the men who framed our constitution whenever a doubt arose about the meaning of a particular provision resolved that doubt in favor of public liberty. This was the time above all others, and this judicial occasion was the proper occasion for the Senate to show that that doctrine was not a mere political dogma put forth to flatter and cajole the people, but a principle founded in conviction and upon reason. The colossal grandeur of Washington's character still attracted the admiration of the world, and Franklin's quiet memory climbed to heaven, and the pure philosophy of Jefferson illuminated the path of statesmen. Madison's wisdom was the standard of all orthodoxy and Jackson's name would be a watchword to the free forever. The American people did not forget what they owed to these men, and if the members of the Senate belonged to that illustrious breed, it was fit that on a judicial occasion like this they should show the mettle of their parentage. He argued that whenever we were considering any feature of the constitution which infringed upon some great right that the constitution had given, we were always to give that feature the narrowest construction possible. This impeachment provision of the constitution affected several of the most important rights that were ever claimed by a people or conceded by a government, and should therefore be strictly construed. For instance, all men charged with criminal offences were entitled to a trial by a jury, but this provision took away the right of the party accused of a trial by his peers, and subjected him to a trial before a political body composed, it might be, of his rivals and his enemies. Mr. Black said, in conclusion, that as he had begun his remarks without exordium, so he would close without a peroration.

Judge Black concluded his argument about three o'clock, when, on motion of Mr. Edmunds, the galleries were cleared and the Senate went into secret session. At five o'clock the doors were re-opened and the Chair announced that the Senate had agreed upon two orders, which were read as follows:—

Ordered that, until further notice, the attendance before the Senate of the managers and the respondent will not be required.

Ordered that, when the Senate sitting for the trial of impeachment adjourn, it be to Monday next, at half-past twelve o'clock P. M.

The Senate then adjourned.

OBITUARY.

MAJOR ALEXANDER S. MACOMB.

The death of Major Alexander S. Macomb, of this city, occurred suddenly at a quarter past one o'clock yesterday, at the Union Club, and has cast a gloom over the members of that resort. While engaged in conversation, he complained of oppression and endeavored to leave the club house, but he fell before he could reach the door, and his death followed almost instantaneously, and, probably, unattended by suffering, being caused by the rupture of an aneurism of the heart.

Major Macomb graduated from West Point in 1835. He was the son of Major General Alexander Macomb, who held the rank of Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army, preceding General Scott in the same rank. After serving in the First and Second dragoons on the frontier and in the Florida War he acted as aide-de-camp to his father, and resigned from the army in 1841. While quite young he married Miss Kearney, of New Jersey, and after her decease he continued to reside in this city.

He was a prominent member of the Union Club and was well known in all circles of society, where his courteous bearing, cheerful gallantry and good nature made him universally beloved. His associates and all who knew him will long regret the gallant gentleman and amiable companion so suddenly removed from their midst.

WILLIAM F. M'NAMARA.

After a very brief but painful illness William F. McNamara died at two P. M. yesterday, at his residence in this city, No. 47 Henry street. The deceased was a well known lawyer, who has been practising with marked success at the Bar in New York for a number of years. He had the reputation of being a well read lawyer, and, though not a brilliant advocate, was generally master of his case and his briefs evinced close and indefatigable research. Outside of his profession he had a host of friends, being a person of rare culture and most genial social qualities.

HON. STEPHEN B. LEONARD.

A telegram from Owego, N. Y., under date of the 8th inst., reports as follows:—Hon. Stephen B. Leonard, the founder of the Owego Gazette, a Representative in Congress four years, and who filled many important offices of trust, died here this morning. His funeral will take place on Wednesday.

HIRAM GARRETSON.

A telegram from Cleveland, Ohio, under date of the 8th inst., reports as follows:—"Hiram Garretson, late President of the Second National Bank of this city, died last evening of heart disease. He was to have represented this district as the first delegate to the Cincinnati Convention next month."

JOSEPH P. RONAYNE, M. P.

A cable telegram from London, under date of the 8th inst., reports the occurrence of the death of Joseph Philip Ronayne, Member of Parliament for the city of Cork, Ireland. He was a liberal and a home ruler, and was greatly respected by men of all classes for his ability and integrity.

FIRE IN MULBERRY STREET.

At half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out on the top floor of the four story frame tenement, No. 9 Mulberry street, occupied by Ellen Murphy. Damage $50. The building was damaged to the extent of $500.

THE EXPLOSION.

Following the Trail of Suspected Persons.

ORIGIN OF THE STRIKE.

A Reward to be Offered by the Railroad Company.

The authorities of Jersey City were all astir yesterday on the subject of the explosion. Mayor Siedler, at the request of many prominent citizens, consented to appoint commissioners to appraise the damage caused by the catastrophe and report as soon as possible. This will be a precaution against exorbitant claims in case the city should be sued for damages. The Mayor intends to act with the committee so that he may be able to advise the different boards in any difficulty which may arise. The Board of Fire Commissioners has summoned several witnesses to appear to-morrow evening and give testimony on the subject. Chief of Police Champney and Captain Glenney, of the Third precinct police, were closeted for three hours in the evening with Contractor McAndrew and Superintendent Oakley. James Stanton, the night watchman at the eastern entrance of the tunnel, has been summoned to appear this evening. His statement, as delivered to a HERALD reporter and published in yesterday's HERALD, is pronounced a falsehood by Mr. McAndrew. It was a great part of Stanton's duty to look after the powder house. The police authorities are convinced that Stanton is in possession of important information. Officer Keenan, of the Third precinct, was brought before the Chief of Police, and he testified that he saw three men in the vicinity of the explosion three or four minutes before it occurred. The names of these men are withheld from publication for obvious reasons. When asked if he had heard a pistol shot at the mouth of the tunnel shortly before the explosion he replied in the negative. The evidence that several strikers were loitering round Mr. McAndrew's residence during the evening in a suspicious manner was corroborated.

There is a remarkable unanimity of opinion among the directors and officers of the railroad company on the point that the explosion was the work of a malicious scoundrel. Superintendent Oakley desires to correct a statement regarding the possession of the key of the magazine on Saturday night. He says that when the explosion occurred the key was in the possession of Reynolds, the timekeeper, who did not return it after he had taken a supply of cartridges in the afternoon. At the same time he reaffirmed the opinion that the key was perfectly safe in Reynolds' custody.

THE STRIKERS WEAKENING.

Two gangs of the strikers returned to work in the tunnel yesterday. There are fifteen or twenty mischievous characters who expressed a willingness to return to work at the old rate of wages, but Mr. McAndrew refused to admit them. "On no account will the promoters of the strike be allowed to return," was his stern reply. One of the gangs which returned was headed by a man named Keegan, who expressed regret on behalf of his men for the foolish step they had taken. He endeavored to intercede for others, but without avail.

WHAT THE STRIKERS WANTED.

Mr. McAndrew was asked yesterday to explain his position toward the strikers, and he replied as follows:—"Up to three months ago the men on the benches and headings were receiving $1 60 a day, and the 'muckers' $1 50. The wages were then reduced to $1 25 per day for all the men, on account of the severity of the times, and the men submitted without complaint. About the 15th of April some of the men who were experts in the 'heading' business applied for an increase to $1 50. To this Mr. McAndrew consented and fixed the 1st of May for the new rate. The 'muckers' made a demand for the same rate, to which the contractor refused to accede. Now in Baltimore, where a tunnel seven miles in length is being constructed, the men receive only $1 25. I have hitherto refrained from expressing my dissatisfaction with the manner in which a great number of the men in my employment attended to their work. Many a time when I entered the tunnel I saw the men running around doing nothing, with their lights flickering like fairies in the forts, and when they saw me they would sneak behind another gang and pretend they were at work."

The manufacturers of the rend rock powder state that they are familiar with the locality and the circumstances relating to the strike against the contractor, and remarked that there is "not a chance in a thousand that the disaster occurred otherwise than by design;" that rend rock explodes only under definite conditions, such as having a fulminating cap on the end of a fuse, with confinement. If set fire to it don't explode, but burns slowly. There must be imparted a certain degree of heat. The manufacturers have had powder on hand for four years, and tests are regularly applied without showing any sign of deterioration or chemical change. It has been in constant use at the mines on Lake Champlain for years without an accident of any sort. At the Bergen Hill magazine it would only have been necessary to force a cartridge beneath the foundation, with a cap and fuse attached. They believe there could have been only a small quantity of powder on hand—not more than two cases, or 200 pounds—as the contractor had not been supplied lately; and as the work was nearly finished, but little was required. The workmen employed there all assumed to know much more than they chose to tell as to the cause of the explosion, using sly winks and signs among themselves where words might be indiscreet. They are believed to have a correct understanding of the case beyond a doubt.

HOBOKEN SUFFERERS.

Last evening a meeting was held at Otto's Cottage Garden, Hoboken, with reference to the question who should pay for the damage inflicted by the explosion in Hoboken. Upward of 200 people were present. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Charles Spielman Mr. H. D. Gerdts acted as secretary. Addresses were made by Matthew Conklin and Samuel G. Derrickson, Jr., who represented the sufferers of Hoboken. They stated in substance that they would ascertain on whom the responsibility rests for permitting the storage of the combustibles in the city limits and whether the agreement in regard to the storage of the explosive material had been violated. After some discussion Mr. Gerdts moved that a committee of seven be appointed from among the heaviest losers, whose business it should be to ascertain the amount of damage done and report at a future meeting. The following gentlemen were named as such committee:—Bernard McCloskey, Matthew Conklin, Patrick Landergen, D. Rangas and John McDermott.

WHAT PRESIDENT SLOAN SAYS.

A reporter of the HERALD called upon Mr. Sloan, the President of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, yesterday to ascertain his views in regard to the cause of the explosion and what action the railway company propose taking in the premises. Mr. Sloan said the matter of storing and caring for the powder and other combustibles necessary for the prosecution of the work now going on at the tunnel was wholly in the hands of the contractor, and in one sense the company had nothing to do with it. He said, however, that the railroad company will make a thorough examination of the whole affair, and will spare no pains to bring the guilty parties, if any such there be, to justice. He knew nothing of the cause of the explosion other than what had been published in the papers; but he thought, from the fact of the contractors having had a deal of trouble with the strikers, that some of them had set fire to the combustibles as has been charged. The most of the damage done, Mr. Sloan said, was sustained by the company, as all the buildings near the scene of the explosion, and which were damaged more than any others, are owned by them, the road having been compelled to buy them to gain the right of way.

As for the contractor, Mr. Sloan thought he had lived up to all the requirements of his agreement. He had permission from the city authorities of Hoboken to store the powder where he did, and as he kept it in a brick building and well guarded by a private watchman he (Mr. Sloan) did not see that more could be done. Mr. Sloan had never heard that it was ever found necessary to dampen the powder in question to prevent spontaneous combustion.

In regard to offering a reward for the apprehension of the guilty parties in connection with the disaster, that was a matter properly belonging to the contractor; nevertheless Mr. Sloan had sent word as soon as the news of the explosion reached him to offer a suitable reward on behalf of the company. In the matter of suits for damages, if any are brought by parties having sustained injuries to person or property, the President was not clear as to who would be held responsible, but presumed the contractor would.

VIEWS OF NEAREST NEIGHBORS.

As was stated in yesterday's HERALD, the residents on Palisade avenue have for a long time been protesting against the magazine being left in a position which, in the event of an explosion, would expose the neighboring houses to almost certain destruction. Mr. Charles Roe was one of the most prominent in opposing the privileges granted to the railroad company and the contractors in placing the powder house on the site it occupied. He and other gentlemen stated to a reporter that the mass of explosives contained in its precincts might be subject to the action of temperature to an extent apt to make the vicinity unsafe, and, besides, the place might be unwatched and so be accessible at any time to parties maliciously inclined who might gratify a personal grudge at the expense of all the residents in the locality. A baker residing in the neighborhood stated that he had heard many people speak of the magazine and the disaster that might any day occur from some of the workmen conspiring against the bosses. The disposition of the bricks and mortar of which the structure was built admitted of their being easily displaced, and any one bent on mischief could readily attach a fuse that would carry destruction with it. This gentleman and various laborers who had frequent occasion to pass the place at night said that they had frequently been near it at a late hour and had never seen any watchman in charge. Tramps and drunkards had often sought the shelter of its walls, and no one had ever been present to drive them off. In fact, so unmindful had the proper authorities been of guarding the magazine that a knowledge of its use was known only to people living in the immediate neighborhood, and these, from being habituated to it, had generally overlooked the necessity of inquiring if the conditions of the permit granted the contractor by the city to store "rendrock" there had been observed. The result was that no watchman was detailed specially to guard the building as the stipulations of the permit prescribed, and it was within the reach of any one who cared to apply its store of combustibles to nefarious purposes. On the day of the explosion the report was generally circulated that a man named James Staunton was intrusted with the charge of the magazine, and was to attend it at all hours of the night. A visit to Mr. Staunton, who was found in the bowels of the earth, patrolling the tunnel and attired in a costume suggestive of Cornwall mines, dissipated that rumor. Staunton stated that his duty was simply to move from shaft to shaft underneath the ground and keep a lookout at the mouth of the tunnel. He usually had occasion to pass the magazine on coming to his post, and then he was accustomed to take a look at it and see if everything was all right, but he had not been detailed to keep guard over it during the night, and on being questioned did not seem to know who did officiate in that capacity.

"RENDROCK" POWDER.

Last Friday Mr. J. R. Rand, of the firm of J. R. Rand & Co., the manufacturers of the "rendrock" powder, which caused such a terrible explosion at the Bergen tunnel on Saturday night, made arrangements to try some experiments as to the value of the powder in tearing stumps of trees out of the ground. The experiments took place yesterday about eleven and a half miles from Jersey City, contiguous to Stitt's station, which is on the line of the Paterson and Newark branch of the Erie Railway. The place selected was a clearing belonging to Mr. Thomas W. Satterthwaite, of No. 50 Clinton place, New York, who owns about 150 acres in the vicinity and who intends to make a park of the location where the experiments were tried. Mr. J. R. Rand, Mr. C. H. Scott, the agent of the company, and the HERALD reporter arrived on the ground selected about four o'clock yesterday afternoon and found a number of laborers at work digging out stumps of old trees. Mr. Satterthwaite and several property owners of the neighborhood were also present.

Stumps of oak and chestnut trees were selected for the trial. Holes an inch in diameter having been bored into the top roots of these, Captain Scott, who conducted the operation, produced his terrible powder, which, by the way, lay in the rear part of the buggy in which Mr. Rand, Captain Scott and the reporter rode for over five miles, somewhat to the reporter's surprise when it was taken out. This "rendrock" powder was done up in cartridges containing five ounces each, and to show how safely it could be handled Captain Scott took one of these cartridges, threw it against a rock near by and then kicked it in the air. The method of exploding the powder was then explained. A fuse was brought out about two feet in length, and a cap containing fulminating powder was fixed upon one end, which was then inserted into the cartridge, which was covered with oil paper. One of these five ounce cartridges was then placed in the hole made at the root of one of the stumps. The fuse was lighted by Captain Scott, and every one present ran for a tree, from behind which he peeped anxiously while the fuse burned. A loud explosion was heard, and pieces of the stump weighing three and four pounds each were thrown in every direction fifty feet in the air, but nobody was hurt, thanks to the sheltering trees. On examination it was found that the stump selected had been but not fully uprooted. Several others were tried subsequently with greater success. One in particular, a tough oak stump, was bored through to its centre. Captain Scott placed in the hole two cartridges—ten ounces of the powder. When the experimenters returned after the explosion they found that it had been taken completely out of the ground, roots and all.

It was then proposed to try its effect on stone. Three cartridges were placed upon an imbedded rock and covered with clay. The fuse was lighted, but this time the spectators ran for the trees with unusual vigor, evidently not wishing to have a piece of rock unceremoniously descend upon the tops of their heads. But the explosion took place without any great effect as far as casting rock into the air, as its force seemed to be directed downward altogether, and it so that it could be removed by one man with little trouble. To further show the nature of this powder a quantity was laid upon a stone and a lighted match applied to it. It burned quietly, like ordinary gunpowder, without any explosion whatsoever. In fact, the experiment proved pretty satisfactorily that the powder would not explode without the cap containing the fulminating powder, which produced the necessary concussion.

It was argued by Mr. Rand and his agent that, after the exhibition made of the powder and its effects, there could be only one conclusion arrived at as to the on Saturday night—that some one connected with the work on the tunnel and fully acquainted with the manner of exploding the powder must have operated on the twenty kegs stored in the magazine on Bergen Hill.

A PARCEL OF EXPLOSIVES.

A DANGEROUS CHARGE INTRUSTED TO A RESTAURANT KEEPER BY A MYSTERIOUS MAN.

Yesterday morning, while an officer of the Fourth precinct was patrolling his beat he noticed Louis Kapp, a restaurant keeper, of No. 152 William street, carrying to the sidewalk a curious looking bundle, which he seemed about to expose in the gutter. When he drew near enough to distinguish the contents of the parcel he saw with surprise that they were large cartridges. He questioned Kapp and endeavored to prevent him throwing in the street what must be dangerous explosives, and as the latter expressed his intention to let them remain no longer in his house the officer took the man and the parcel to the station house. On being interrogated he said that almost a year ago a tall man with a dark mustache, who seemed from his appearance to be a mariner, entered his place and called for a glass of beer. When he had paid for the beverage he took from under his arm a paper parcel and left it on the counter, requesting the proprietor to take care of it till his return. The parcel was placed on the upper shelf of a closet in the barroom and permitted to lie there till this morning, when, on taking it down, the paper was torn, displaying its contents. The memory of the Bergen explosion was ripe in Mr. Kapp's mind, and he resolved the explosives should remain no longer in his house. The police relieved him of his dangerous charge and sent the bundle to the Bureau of Combustibles.

MANUAL FOR LETTER CARRIERS.

Postmaster James has compiled a manual of instructions for letter carriers, which were formerly verbal, and consequently not considered imperative or obligatory. They were published and distributed to the employés yesterday. In addition to the general regulations, a number of special instructions are given on punctuality, obedience to orders, promptitude and fidelity in deliveries and collections, propriety in demeanor and language while on duty, and neatness in person and dress and the acceptance of gratuities is forbidden.

A DETECTIVE'S CABLE DESPATCH.

Detective Thomas Sampson, of the New York Stock Exchange, telegraphs from London, where he is at present looking for the forger Gray, the following despatch to the Stock Exchange Board:—"Louisville officers after Rivers, and Boston officers after Winslow, and self nonplussed at turn in affairs. Saturday Review and Pall Mall Gazette side with us; try and stir up New York papers to press for early settlement. Present condition of things a luxury to rascals and expense to both governments, and ties our hands."

ANTI-USURY MEETING.

The seventh annual meeting of the American Anti-Usury Society was held at Science Hall yesterday. Mr. Edward Palmer, the President, submitted as the sense of the society propositions declaring interest on money an unrighteous tax on labor and demoralizing in its effects upon both borrowers and lenders. R. W. Hume, E. H. Heywood, J. K. Ingalls, Stephen Pearl Andrews, Thomas Davis and others took part in the discussion.

RAPID TRANSIT FOR BROOKLYN.

THE ALDERMEN GRANT A CHANGE OF ROUTE TO THE ELEVATED RAILWAY COMPANY.

At the meeting of the Brooklyn Common Council yesterday afternoon the Committee on Railroads, to whom was referred the petition of the Brooklyn Elevated Railway Company asking permission to operate their road through certain streets and avenues, reported in favor of granting the desired franchise. The road is to commence on Water street, near the Fulton ferry, running thence to Pearl street, through Willoughby street to Gold street, along the latter street to the junction of DeKalb avenue and Fulton street, and along Macomber square and DeKalb avenue to Grand avenue, thence to Lexington avenue, to Broadway, to the city line. Permission is also given to operate a branch commencing at the junction of Sands and Pearl streets, and thence along Sands to the New York bridge. The franchise also accords permission to cross said bridge.

THE COURTS.

The New York Elevated Railway Injunction.

Justice Daly's Opinion Reviewed by the General Term.

THE EFFORTS TO SAVE RUBENSTEIN.

The suit brought in the Court of Common Pleas by John Patten, owner and proprietor of the Pacific Hotel, in Greenwich street, against the New York Elevated Railroad Company to prevent the construction of a turnout in front of his hotel, in the progress of its hurried but acrimonious litigation has reached the General Term. How a riot seemed imminent on account of the persistent prosecution by the railroad company of its work in digging the foundation for its pillars in front of the hotel and interfering with Mr. Patten's vault; how a temporary injunction was granted by Judge Van Brunt against the railroad company, restraining it from continuing its obnoxious work; how Chief Justice Daly has made this injunction permanent; how an appeal was taken from Judge Daly's decision—all these facts have been given in the HERALD. It was on the appeal referred to that the case came up for argument yesterday before the General Term, Judges Robinson and Van Brunt being on the bench. General Roger A. Pryor appeared for Mr. Patten, and ex-Judge Emmot for the railroad company. Ex-Judge Emmot, who opened the argument, insisted that the title of the plaintiff does not extend to the middle of the street, or include the land within the limits of the street; that the plaintiff's deed plainly excludes the street, and that, whatever may have been the title of the plaintiff's grantors, the plaintiff's boundary, as given by his deed, is the west side of the street, and not the street itself, or its middle thread or line. He next took up the question of the title of the defendants to their franchises. By an act passed April 22, 1867, this company was authorized to build and operate an elevated railroad with a motor since disused, for a certain distance, as an experiment. Commissioners were provided by the act, who were, among other things, to examine this experimental structure, and if they thought proper to certify to its success. Upon obtaining this certificate this company was authorized to build this kind of a road along Greenwich street and Ninth avenue to Harlem River. The experimental section was accordingly built, and the commissioners certified in favor of it July 2, 1867. Thereupon the company continued the construction of the road to Twenty-ninth street. This is the present structure, only the plan of motive power having been changed, in a manner hereafter shown, from stationary to locomotive power. In 1868 an act was passed with reference to this company. The only part of this act to which he deemed it necessary to refer was a clause authorizing the change of the name of the company from West Side and Yonkers Railway Company to West Side Elevated Railway Company. In July, 1868, the West Side and Yonkers Railway Company filed a certificate, authorized by its stockholders and officers, changing its name to the West Side Elevated (Patented) Railway Company of New York City, and ever afterward did business under this name. Immediately thereafter, on the 1st of August, 1868, under the name of the West Side Elevated Railway Company of New York, it executed a mortgage of its road, property and franchises to trustees to secure bonds which it issued. This mortgage was afterward foreclosed at the request of the bondholders by a suit in the Superior Court of this city. Judgment of foreclosure and sale was obtained September 7, 1871, and on the 5th of October, 1871, the property, road, rolling stock and franchises of the company were sold under this judgment to James A. Cowing. On the 9th of May, 1871, that company, acting under the name of the West Side Elevated Railway Company, made a second mortgage of its road, property and franchises to James A. Cowing. On the 27th of October, 1871, the New York Elevated Railway Company, the present defendants, were duly organized under the General Railroad law. The second mortgage to Cowing was foreclosed by a suit in this court; the road, property and franchises of the former company were sold under that judgment on the 6th of December, 1871, purchased by the present defendants and conveyed to them by the referee by deed dated December 7, 1871. On the 2d of January, 1872, Cowing, the purchaser at the sale upon the foreclosure of the first mortgage, conveyed to the defendants all the road, property and franchises so purchased by him. This, it was claimed, makes a perfect deduction and chain of title to the franchises, rights and property originally of the West Side and Yonkers Elevated Railroad Company. The mortgage by that company was valid. He insisted, further, that by virtue of the title to these franchises the defendants were acting legally in constructing the turnout in question. He next took up the question as to the constitutionality of the acts under which the franchises were held, and urged in conclusion that the order continuing the injunction was erroneous and should be reversed. In reply General Pryor made an equally lengthy argument. He claimed that Mr. Patten was owner in fee of the land in the street, and as such was entitled to the injunction; that he owns the soil of the street usque ad medium filum viæ, subject only to the easement of a public way; that the use of a street for a railroad is an additional burden beyond the public easement, which cannot be imposed by any power without compensation to the owner of the fee; that actual payment or statutory provision for compensation was a condition precedent to appellant's right to take or enter upon respondent's soil in the street; that respondent's property in the soil of the street involves the right to construct vaults under the street; that they have been in the actual possession and occupancy of plaintiff, under claim of ownership, for more than twenty years, and in the adverse, exclusive and continuous possession of himself and grantors for more than sixty years; that this constitutes conclusive evidence of respondent's right to maintain the vaults, and that from this conceded state of facts that the soil in the street, respondent's property, has been invaded and subverted and his vaults broken, penetrated and occupied by appellant in the construction of a permanent railway to be built and operated over respondent's land, and all without consent or compensation, it results that he presents a clear case for injunctive relief. He insists, further, that the constructing and operating a railroad in a street without competent authority was a public nuisance; that only the Legislature can authorize the construction of a railroad in the street. He next considered the act of 1867, which, he claimed, was inoperative to authorize the construction of the turnout. He insisted that this act is unconstitutional in that, being a private and local bill, it embraces several subjects, one of which, the construction of a permanent railroad, including this turnout, is not expressed in its title; that if valid the act purports only to authorize a construction to be completed within five years from the 22d of April, 1867, and does not pretend to authorize the structure here threatened, a turnout for the use of railway carriages propelled by steam; that the act of 1868 is ineffectual to authorize the construction in controversy; that it is unconstitutional in that, being a private and local bill, either it embraces two subjects, both of which are expressed in the title, and so the whole act is void (Cooley on Const. Lim., 148), or else, embracing several subjects, its title conveys no intimation of the authority in question to construct a railway after the lapse of the original limitation; that if valid the act purports only to authorize the construction of a railway before the 22d of October, 1873, and gives no authority to erect this turnout in 1876; that the act of 1875 is equally nugatory for appellant's purpose, being palpably repugnant to sections 17 and 18, article 3 of the constitution of the State, and that, being a public nuisance, and productive of a particular and peculiar injury to respondent, he has a right to interdict construction of the turnout.

At the close of the argument the Court took the papers, reserving its decision.

SUICIDE VITIATING A LIFE POLICY.

There was an interesting argument yesterday in the Superior Court, General Term, before Judges Sedgwick and Speir, upon the question as to whether suicide vitiates a life policy. The argument was in the suit brought by Harvey Weed against the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company to recover $10,000 insurance on the life of James M. Benedict. The policy of insurance was taken out in November, 1864, with a clause in the policy that the same should be void in case the insurer committed suicide. Three years later Mr. Benedict shot himself in the head. At the close of the argument the Court took the papers.

IGNORING THE GENERAL TERM.

An irrepressible smile crept over the faces of the judges of the Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday, with a laugh generally among the lawyers present at the extraordinary position in which a single judge sought to place counsel, as well as the General Term, by an order granted in the case of John A. Gray against Samuel W. Green and Henry A. Burr. This cause having been called by Judge Davis, Mr. E. A. Dickerson for the appellant, Green, answered to the cause and stated that since the General Term had, on Friday last, denied the application of Mr. John E. Burrill, who represents Gray, for a rehearing of a former motion in that case, and refusing to delay the appeal from further hearing, he had been served by what purported to be an order made by Judge Donohue, which ordered that all proceedings on the part of Green be stayed until Mr. Burrill's appeal to the Court of Appeals from a former order of the General Term be decided. Mr. Dickerson explained that immediately upon being served with that order on Saturday last he returned notice to Mr. Burrill that he would move at General Term to vacate the order of Judge Donohue. "Obviously," added counsel, "the order of the General Term appealed from by Mr. Burrill is not an appealable order; but the question now to be decided is—Does this order of Judge Donohue, dated Saturday last, when Judge Donohue was not then sitting in Special Term or Chambers, and which upon its face nowhere appears to be an order made regularly in Court, stay this Court, an appellate tribunal, from proceeding in a cause wherein further delay in this appeal had been already refused? In other words, under these circumstances (Mr. Dickerson having recited the proceedings) can Judge Donohue, as a judge out of court, control the business prescribed to be done in the General Term?"

After a statement by Mr. Clarkson N. Potter, who appeared for Mr. Burrill, who was absent, the General Term answered the above interrogatories negatively, and decided to vacate Judge Donohue's order, which was done.

THE CASE OF RUBENSTEIN.

Before the Supreme Court, General Term, of the Second Department, Judges Barnard, Gilbert and Dyckman on the bench, a motion was made yesterday to strike from the calendar the case of Pesach N. Rubenstein, convicted of the murder of Sara Alexander, and whose execution under such conviction was prevented by the stay of proceedings and writ of error granted by Judge Brady, of this department. District Attorney Britton and Assistant District Attorney Snell represented the people, and Messrs. John O. Mott, Wm. A. Beach and Wm. F. Kintzing the prisoner. The motion was denied and the cause set down for argument on Friday next. Should the General Term affirm the conviction and refuse a new trial Rubenstein will again be brought before the Court for resentence and suffer the extreme penalty of the law, unless an additional writ of error is obtained taking the case to the Court of Appeals.

BLACK FRIDAY SUITS.

Jules R. Gimbernat, a broker, has brought suit against Jay Gould to recover $89,000 for commission on a sale of $855,000 worth of gold on Black Friday. The defendant, as the plaintiff alleges, refused to abide by the contract, whereupon the suit was instituted. A demurrer was interposed to the complaint on the ground that the plaintiff did not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action, inasmuch as the damages were not properly set forth. The demurrer was argued before Chief Justice Monell, in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday, and decision was reserved.

SUMMARY OF LAW CASES.

William S. Keiley, the Special Term Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, has written a work on the law and practice of insolvent assignments in the State of New York, with forms, which must prove of great benefit to the legal fraternity. The Court of Common Pleas being the County Court in the county of New York has jurisdiction over these proceedings; and on account of his official position it is to be presumed that the practice as laid down by Mr. Keiley meets with the approbation of the judges of that Court. The forms are very full and complete, and will be found very useful.

Sigismund Nettell, who, with his father, Theobold Nettell, was arrested some time ago, accused of having committed a forgery in Austria, was under examination before Judge Blatchford yesterday, on a writ of habeas corpus. There was also a motion for the discharge of the prisoners on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to hold them. Judge Blatchford dismissed the writ, and said that the question as to evidence could not be decided until after the examination was concluded.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Lawrence.

The People, &c., vs. The Bleecker Street and Fulton Ferry Railroad Company and Southworth, &c.—I will grant an order to show cause.

Muller vs. Burchell.—In this case I desire the counsel for the respective parties to file briefs pointing out the precise questions which they wish the Court to pass upon.

Bernheimer vs. Willis.—In this case I see no reason for granting the application for a reargument. The defendant demands affirmative relief, as I understand his answer. He asks that the alleged deed be declared a mortgage, and that the plaintiff be compelled to recover the property to him upon payment of the sum which may be found due to them.

Taylor vs. Mabie et al.—Counsel have omitted to present their notice of motion to the Court. The motion cannot be decided until I have the notice before me.

Stewart vs. Lappin.—Motion to vacate order of arrest granted, with $10 costs.

The Murray Hill Bank vs. Flandrow.—Motion granted and cause placed on Special Circuit calendar for May 26, 1876.

Crankshaw vs. Langley.—The supplementary affidavit is not verified.

In the matter of Hatch.—The motion or peremptory writ of mandamus is granted. The affidavits seem to show a technical demand and refusal. No costs.

Murray vs. Armstrong.—As these are on the day calendar of Special Term I do not think I ought to interfere. Leave is given to move before the Justice holding the Special Term, and the motions before me are denied, without costs.

Hoe vs. Buckmaster et al.—I cannot strike this answer out as sham. Moyland vs. Tyrel, 45 N. Y., 281; Thompson vs. Erie Railway Company, 45 N. Y., 468; Youngs vs. Kent, 46 N. Y., 672. Motion denied, without costs.

Vath vs. Vath.—Reference ordered to Moses Ely to ascertain and report whether counsel fee and alimony should be granted and the amount thereof.

Wyckoff vs. Bardon.—Let an order be entered directing the plaintiff to file security for costs in the sum of $1,000.

Ferniss vs. Ferniss.—This is an action for limited divorce, and, as I regard it as extremely doubtful whether the plaintiff can succeed, I must deny this motion, without costs. Jones vs. Jones, 2 Barb. Ch. R., 146; Stevens vs. Stevens; Coddington vs. Coddington, 10 Abbt., 450; Morrell vs. Morrell, 2 Barb., 480.

Banta vs. Kent.—The defendant's counsel is requested to send in his points in these cases.

McLean vs. Worman.—Why is this application made to the Court? The action is for the recovery of money only. (See Code, sec. 246.)

Mahoney vs. Gieb et al.—The affidavit served with the notice of motion being contradicted in respect to the alleged value of the mortgaged premises, I do not think that I ought to appoint a receiver. The motion is therefore denied, with leave to renew on further affidavits.

In the matter of Lingard vs. the Receiver of the Third Avenue Savings Bank.—I shall confirm the referee's report, but will not impose costs upon the receiver, who seems to have acted in good faith. The petitioner should be paid amount of referee's report.

Bishop vs. Davis.—The affidavits upon which the order of arrest was granted appear to me to disclose a case of fraud for which the defendant was liable to be arrested. The learned justice who made the order passed upon the question which was within his discretion, and I think correctly. Bennett vs. Jordan, 21 N. Y., 238. As this motion is based solely on the affidavits on which the order of arrest was granted, the allegations in these affidavits are to be taken as true. The motion must therefore be denied, with leave to the defendant to renew upon further affidavits. No costs of motion.

Barnett vs. Benjamin.—The motion is denied on the ground that an order of arrest in an action on contract may be granted upon facts entirely independent of those necessary to be stated in complaint. See Wait's Code, p. 179, and cases cited. And also on the ground that the allegations of fraud in the complaint were necessary to show that the plaintiff was entitled to bring the action before the term of credit originally agreed upon had expired.

In the matter of Barton, &c.—In consequence of the fact that one of the petitioners is related to me, without the degree which prohibits a judge from acting, I must decline to pass upon this petition. 2 R. S., p. 275; 2 Barb. ch. 331; Higbe vs. Secor, and 1 Delno., 186. Present this to another judge.

Harriott vs. Emerson et al.—Conceding the law to be as claimed by the counsel for the defendant, it seems to me that the defendant's remedy is not by an application at Chambers to dismiss the complaint. The motion should be made when the case is moved for trial at the Special Term, or if the answer does not sufficiently present the facts the defendants should move at Chambers for leave to amend the answer.—Motion denied, without costs.

Elmendorf vs. The Globe Fire Insurance Company; Wheeler vs. The National Bank of Commerce; Koehler vs. Wheelin.—Orders granted.

By Judge Barrett.

Hart vs. Pettit.—If the receiver still declines Mr. Hart's offer of $200, as to the sufficiency of which I express no opinion on these papers, there must, in view of the charges contained in the opposing affidavit, be a reference to take proof as to all the facts and to report with his opinion. It will be referred to Philo T. Ruggles, Esq., or any other gentleman of equal standing who may be agreed upon by the parties.

Moran vs. Watkins.—The plaintiff was to submit some authorities upon this motion, which he has failed to do. I assume, therefore, that he has been unable to discover any, and that the decision denying the motion which was made upon the argument, but delayed to enable the plaintiff to look up such authorities, ought now to be promulgated.

Coleman and another vs. Hart.—Motion to vacate order of arrest denied, with $10 costs.

In the matter of Ely, Jesup, Adler, Wilkins, Morgan, Branch, Hope, Moore, Lester and Shaw, to vacate assessment.—I have no recollection of these cases and would like an explanation before signing the orders.

The Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company vs. Butler.—The action is really a creditor's bill. The relief asked is to set aside certain mortgages and to have the plaintiffs' judgment decreed to be a valid lien upon the realty. This is not for the recovery of the realty or an estate or interest therein. The plaintiff, if he succeeds, will recover judgment on real property, not any interest on costs therein. Defendant will recover the right to have the real estate sold to some one, who by such sale will acquire an interest. All the plaintiff can acquire is the satisfaction of its judgment out of the process. The other points go to the jurisdiction of the Court and should be presented by demurrer or answer. The motion to change the place of trial must be denied, with $10 costs.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

FIFTY-SEVENTH STREET COURT.

Before Judge Kasmire.

CHARGES AGAINST THE POLICE.

Officer Hess, of the Eighteenth precinct, arraigned Henry A. Toner, owner of a lager beer saloon, at No. 323 avenue A, on a charge of disorderly conduct, and his wife Lena on a charge of violating the Sunday Excise law. He testified that he saw Mrs. Toner in the act of drawing something from a keg and that there were glasses with beer in them on a table, at which sat two men. The latter and Toner swore that there was not a drop of beer on tap in the place when the arrests were made. Toner also swore that the arrest of himself and wife was the result of spite on the part of Captain Garland and his officers on account of a letter which he had written to the captain some time ago, in which he threatened to seek relief at the hands of the Police Commissioners, if the crowd of loafers who were in the habit of congregating at his corner were not compelled to keep away. He had also refused to give the police either cigars or liquor without money; and this and that put together he believed to be the cause of his arrest and that of his wife.

The Court thought it to be his duty to investigate the charges here made; and for this purpose, as well as to give the officer an opportunity to make good his case, the examination was set down for to-day. The Court felt interested to know how many other places beside Toner's were open in the Eighteenth precinct on Sunday. Officer Hess could not tell him; but a prisoner, whom he had for intoxication, mentioned two liquor stores, at least, which were open all day.

NOT THIS BROGAN.

NEW YORK, May 8, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In the law reports contained in last Thursday's HERALD appeared the article headed "Exonerating a Police Surgeon," which speaks of a transaction between Dr. Powell and a man named Brogan, who had endeavored, through improper means, to be appointed on the police force, in which the name of John C. Brogan erroneously appears. Have the kindness to correct by stating that it was James C. Brogan, and not John C., who figured in that very doubtful transaction. As I am the only John C. Brogan in the city, by inserting the above you will do justice to yours truly,

JOHN C. BROGAN, No. 196 Grand street.

BICYCLING.

History of the Sport Here and in Europe.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CHAMPIONS.

The Coming Contest at the Rink—Stanton and Butler's Practice.

At present a novelty in the sporting world and athletics is bicycling. In England it has long been the rage and has commanded the attention of some of the most prominent men in that country, where the machines used are considered great mechanical aids to people's locomotion. Aside from this consideration—business utility—the bicycle has grown to occupy a prominent place on the turf since D. Stanton has taken to measuring speed with horses, many of which he has beaten in long runs, say of from six to ten miles each. Besides him, however, are other great bicycle riders in Europe, such as Keen, Markham, Moore, Thüillet and others, who are all good men, able to do fifty miles in good time. They have, however, succumbed to Stanton from time to time in contests which attracted nearly as much attention in England at the time of their occurrence as "the Derby." For some years back this interest in the peculiar sport has been gaining ground in England and in France. In the former it has become established among the betting men as one of the best risks for their money; in the latter polite society has long since taken it up as a pastime, and in Paris there are bicycle clubs, the members of which make long journeys of pleasure from one end of the country to the other on their machines in fine weather, often riding from eighty to one hundred miles a day. The custom is to travel along the highways from town to village and from village to town, pausing to lunch, sup and sleep wherever the hours for these refreshments find them. Bicycling has therefore become a sort of fine art in these countries, and it is astonishing what speed can be attained by experts. For example, at one time Stanton accomplished the extraordinary feat of riding on a bicycle 650 miles in seven consecutive days, and at another time he rode 106 miles in 7h. 58m. and 54⅘s. His feats and those of other well known riders in the Old World have become old stories, but now there is a new interest awakening among Americans in this amusement which bids fair to command a large share of popularity. Years ago all our young people were anxious to become expert velocipedists; but the vehicles were clumsy and the thoroughfares not adapted to them, so that the keen desire for this species of locomotion died out to be revived by the introduction of the greatly improved English and French bicycles and the achievements of transatlantic champions. Our own riders, Messenger, McClellan and Harding have acquired distinction by their efforts to arouse enthusiasm in bicycling; but their achievements have not been of a character to kindle any very great flame in the popular heart. They have, however, laid the foundation for a good excitement which it is believed will blaze forth almost immediately.

THE FIFTY-MILE RACE.

Just now, of course, the coming contest at the Rink next Wednesday night between Messrs. D. Stanton, the famous bicycle rider of Great Britain, and Mr. William Butler, the champion of Kentucky, engrosses the attention of lovers of athletic sports. The latter gentleman is not a professional rider, but is, nevertheless, one of the most expert velocipedists in the country. He is a very young man and well known in our best social circles. He was a member of the Bicycle Club in Paris, and rode from that city to Brest on his favorite vehicle. He has made a journey of 132 miles in France between sunrise and sunset and took a silver medal in a race with the champion of that country for expert riding. He is tall and slim, not weighing more than 150 pounds, and is in very good condition. Yesterday afternoon, as on former occasions, both the men took a training ride at the Rink on Third avenue. A HERALD reporter, who happened in there about three o'clock, found Mr. Stanton making preparations for what he called a short hour's "spin on his machine." He is about five feet, eleven inches high and weighs about 156 pounds. He is in excellent condition, and looks as hard as iron. He was chalking out a track, the entire circuit of the Rink, with the aid of a line and whiting. This somewhat tedious operation occupied his attention for more than an hour, because it was necessary that the oblong should be as perfect as possible, and as nearly the size of the course to be travelled on Wednesday night as it could be made. The reporter addressed Mr. Stanton and asked him what he was about to do. "Oh," replied Mr. Stanton, "I am just going to take a spin on my machine for practice. You see, I have not been able to ride for the last few days, owing to the circus that was here last week, and I feel a little out of condition. You must know that a man cannot afford to neglect his practice in this kind of thing on the eve of a race, for he needs all his skill to run successfully so lengthy a course as that we are about to travel. Fifty miles will try a man's powers."

"What do you think of bicycling in this country?" said the reporter.

"Well, I hardly know what to think of it," replied he, "because I have not seen much of your country. About New York, it seems to me there is not that keen interest felt in it that might be expected to exist in such a large sporting centre. Perhaps this is because your streets and roads are sadly against bicycle riding. They are rough, stony and thronged all the time by cars and vehicles. If you had a track or practice ground in one of the parks perhaps gentlemen would take pleasure in the exercise, and sports, matches and displays might be more frequent. You can see how popular bicycling is in England when I tell you that the shops in Wolverhampton were all closed on the day of my last race in that neighborhood. The people took such an interest in the contest that they flocked by thousands to witness it. Bicycling has become permanently established in the Old Country, and commands as much attention there nowadays as most of the horse races. You, no doubt, have heard of the effort to train postmen to ride bicycles so that they may use them on their routes. In some places, I have been given to understand that the effort has proved successful, and it is hoped that it will be generally adopted. This is feasible in England, especially in the neighborhood of the metropolis, where the roads are macadamized and hard, affording the very best surface imaginable for this kind of travel. It is said that the government is going to experiment with these vehicles in the army. In my judgment, an infantry soldier, with all his accoutrements, could make a journey of fifty or sixty miles a day quite easily. Therefore, you see what an advantage this would be in Central Europe during a war when forced marches were necessary and railways torn up. In these days the roads of France, Germany, Austria and other countries are very good ones, as I know by having travelled on my bicycle over many of them."

"THE PRACTICE SPIN."

Having completed his course to his satisfaction, Mr. Stanton called his attendant and ordered him to bring his riding costume, which consisted of a pair of short buckskin breeches and a light Jersey shirt. He then retired to his dressing room, and a few minutes afterward appeared with what he styled his small machine. It had a large wheel fifty-four inches in diameter, with a small one behind to steady it, and the whole affair was built in England by Keen. As the Rink flooring of pine boards had been waxed by somebody who a short time since hired it for a ball room, it was very slippery and dangerous to ride over. Therefore Mr. Stanton had the machine wheel shod with rubber, which he fastened on to the tires with spun yarn to prevent its yielding or being twisted off. About ten minutes to four Mr. Stanton leaped into the saddle and went away at a rapid gait. He gradually increased his speed, lap after lap, until about the sixteenth or seventeenth, when the rubber tire of the larger wheel slid off and the machine swerved suddenly. Before any one well knew what had happened Mr. Stanton was thrown several feet from the bicycle and rolled over and over on the floor. The workmen and spectators rushed to his side at once, in the belief that he had been seriously hurt; but the hardy fellow was on his feet in an instant, dusty and bleeding, but as cool as a cucumber. He had really sustained a severe shock, for he was going at the rate of fifteen or sixteen miles an hour when he fell; moreover, the fall broke the handle of the vehicle. The rider brought it to the side of the Rink and repaired damages.

BOTH MEN AT WORK.

While he was thus engaged Mr. Butler came in and said:—"Stanton that was a heavy fall. Are you hurt?" "Not much," said the other, whose arm was bleeding copiously from a deep gash near the elbow. "This rubber played me false. I have not had such a mishap for a long, long time. It shakes a fellow." "I don't think that rubber tire is safe," said Mr. Butler, "you had better take my advice—get another. You may injure yourself seriously through using it." Mr. Stanton thanked his rival heartily for his suggestion and continued repairing damages using as before spun yarn and waxends. After the lapse of fifteen or twenty minutes he was ready again as was also Mr. Butler, who appeared on the platform in a costume similar to that worn by Stanton, and with a bicycle fifty-six inches in diameter. Unlike Mr. Stanton, who mounted his machine from the siding of the platform, Mr. Butler gracefully vaulted into his saddle from the floor, and side by side they started off to practice. Mr. Butler is not nearly so muscular as his rival, but he rides splendidly, and went to work on his training tour with a will. The Englishman forced the pace several times to test the mettle of his antagonist, who gallantly accepted each challenge and frequently passed his adversary. The rate of speed may be imagined, when it is known that according to the calculations of the rink men, the champions made seventeen miles in half an hour. They were not ten feet apart at the close. After the practice Mr. Stanton said to the HERALD reporter that he considered Mr. Butler the best bicycle rider he had encountered in America. To use his own words:—"I do not know a man in this country that could have kept beside me during the last half hour so well as Mr. Butler did. He is a rare good rider." At the termination of this run the men were in excellent condition, just warming to their work.

A BICYCLE TRACK NEEDED.

For some time back many gentlemen in this city have taken a great deal of interest in this kind of sport, many of them being perfectly willing to extend their patronage and countenance to contestants in this peculiar sport. But their good intentions have been baffled by the lack of places wherein to practice bicycling. Most of these gentlemen belong to the club in Paris, and some of them are really expert riders; but knowing that it would be next to useless to form a club here because of the bad thoroughfares and the want of a track in any of the parks, they have done nothing toward establishing a bicycle club here. Some of the lovers of the sport sought permission from the Park Commissioners to ride in the Central Park, either in the morning or evening, for practice. It was represented to those officials that the bicycles would not be ridden at any other time in the day than that specified in the permit. But this appeal was unsuccessful, and was denied by the Park Commissioners on the ground that these machines would frighten horses and occasion accident. Now, what is wanted by the admirers of this sport is the privilege to ride in some sequestered part of the Park where nobody can be disturbed nor any animal terrified. They think, and justly, too, no doubt, that room could be made for them in the Central Park as well as for base ball players. Strong efforts are going to be made to form a bicycle club in this city soon, and it is confidently hoped that in a short time there will be as many patrons of the sport here as there are in England. Americans are not lukewarm when they become interested in anything, and if the club which is likely to be formed in New York only get a chance to use a portion of the park for a track bicycling will be fostered, and many spirited contests will be witnessed in the autumn evenings by our citizens. Experts will grow up, and perhaps Mr. Stanton and his French friend may find their betters ere long.

Immediately after the fifty mile match next Wednesday evening Mr. Stanton is going to Washington to run against a trotting horse. He will then go to Chicago for a similar purpose, and returning to New York will go against time from Jersey City to Philadelphia. He has other projects in view.

LEXINGTON RACES.

FIRST DAY OF THE SPRING MEETING OF THE KENTUCKY ASSOCIATION—FINE WEATHER AND EXCITING EVENTS—VAGRANT, THE HARTINGTON FILLY, AND MISDEAL THE WINNERS.

LEXINGTON, KY., May 8, 1876.

The spring meeting of the Kentucky Association began to-day under the most favorable auspices, there being more strangers in attendance than have been on the grounds for many years. The track was in fine condition, the slight rain of the previous day having improved it considerably. The attendance was excellent and was largely composed of ladies from the town and surrounding country, all of whom take great interest in turf events. They made a fine display and enjoyed the sport hugely. It is a pleasure to witness the excitement that pervades the grand stand during the running here, and at no meeting in the year will it be found to be more genuine. The day's sport passed off with seeming satisfaction, notwithstanding that the best horses engaged were not the winners in every instance, Aaron Pennington having lost by an accident in his race.

THE PHŒNIX HOTEL STAKES.

The first race was the Phœnix Hotel Stakes, for three-year-olds, one mile and an eighth, each carrying 90 pounds. Six came to the post, these being F. B. Harper's gray filly Very Fine, James A. Grinstead's brown filly Janet, same owner's chestnut colt Knapsack, T. J. Nichols' bay gelding Vagrant, A. Berford's black colt Yandall, and A. Keene Richard's chestnut filly Clemmie G. Vagrant was the favorite over the field at three to one. On a false start Janet broke away from the man who had her at the post, threw her rider, and lamed herself so much that she had to be withdrawn. When the drum was tapped by Major Thomas, Vagrant sprang off with the lead, Knapsack second, Very Fine third, Clemmie G. fourth and Yandall fifth. As the horses passed the stand Vagrant led a length under a strong pull, Knapsack second, Very Fine third, Clemmie G. fourth, Yandall last. Vagrant galloped strong around the upper turn, with daylight between himself and Knapsack, Very Fine still third, Clemmie G. fourth and Yandall as before. After Vagrant began to ascend the hill, between the half mile and three-quarter poles, he ran away from the others, and at the three-quarter pole was four lengths in front of Knapsack, Clemmie G. third, the others far away and entirely out of the race. Knapsack bolted as soon as he got into the homestretch, and then Clemmie G. went up second, but she was nowhere at the finish, as Vagrant came down the homestretch like a race horse and won the dash by over forty yards, seemingly running at his greatest ease. Clemmie G. was half a length in front of Knapsack, Very Fine fourth, Yandall fifth. Time of the first mile, 1:43, and of the eighth, 13¾ seconds; total, 1:56¾.

VAGRANT,

the winner, is a bay gelding, above fifteen hands three inches in height, with four white legs and a blaze face. He has a neat, pretty head, stout neck, running into well inclined shoulders, great length, good barrel, which is well ribbed home, tremendous quarters and stifles and sound feet and legs. He has a very easy moving way of no friction or labor while running, and glides along a perfect daisy-cutter. A colored lad named Rairey rode him well in the race. Colonel Bruce of the New York Turf, Field and Farm, purchased him for Mr. William Astor, with all his engagements, for $7,000 cash. Vagrant started six times as a two-year-old, winning on five occasions. His first essay was in the Alexander Stake, half a mile, Louisville, when he beat twelve others, Malmistio, Grit and others of the same quality being in the number. At the fall meeting of the Kentucky Association he captured a sweepstake, three-quarters of a mile, eight being behind him and The Nipper and Creedmoor were in the lot. The next day, same place, he won another sweepstake, one mile, beating seven others, the best of his old antagonists being in the rear. He won the Belle Mead Stake, three-quarters of a mile, fall meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club, and wound up the year by winning the Sanford Stakes, same place, two days thereafter. His only defeat in his two-year-old form was in the Tennessee Stakes, spring meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club, in which he carried 92 lbs. (including 5 lbs. extra), but finished third, Creedmoor, with 90 lbs. up, being first, and Tecalco, same weight, second.

The victory and purchase of Vagrant started speculation very lively on the contest to take place between Parole, Vagrant and Creedmoor at Louisville, and the aspect at present is that the Louisville Derby will be the greatest betting race that has taken place for many years.

THE FILLY STAKES.

The second race was the Filly Stakes, for two-year-olds, a dash of half a mile. Seven faced the starter. These were Green Clay's chestnut filly Glenella, James W. Sarvel's chestnut filly Crosslet, James A. Grinstead's chestnut filly Mohun, A. Buford's black filly Lizzie Whips, Green Clay's chestnut filly, by Gilroy, dam by Ringgold; Lyle & Scully's black filly, by Australian, dam Lida, and the same owners' bay filly, by imported Hartington, dam Laura Bruce. Glenella was the favorite. Lizzie Whips was first away, after half an hour wasted in getting them into position, Glenella second, Gilroy's filly (dam Ringgold) third, Mohun fourth, the others in a bunch. Going around the upper turn they were all lapped on each other in a cluster, and at the three-quarter pole the Hartington filly was slightly in the lead, Lizzie Whips second, the Glenella filly third, with the others so close that they could not be separated. Time of the first quarter, 26¼ seconds. Running up the homestretch the race was very doubtful until the youngsters reached the wire, the Hartington filly being first at the score by a length, Glenella second, Lizzie Whips third, Mohun fourth, the Australian filly (out of Lida) fifth, the Gilroy-Ringgold filly sixth. Time of the second quarter 26 seconds, and of the half-mile 52¼ seconds.

THE WINNER

is a small bay filly, 14 hands 3 inches high, with a small star, right hand foot white to pastern, and little white around the left hind foot. She is a speedy looking filly, with muscular quarters, and has a smart racing cut about her.

ONE MILE.

The third race was a dash of one mile for a purse of $250. Eight horses started, comprising J. A. Grinstead's chestnut filly Goldmine, J. H. Miller's chestnut mare Georgie Bowman, T. J. Megibben's chestnut colt Goldsberg, D. V. Johnson's brown horse Grenoble, H. P. McGrath's bay horse Aaron Pennington, B. G. Thomas' bay colt The Bencher, James A. Grinstead's chestnut filly Misdeal, and S. J. Salyor's bay mare Carrie Anderson. Aaron Pennington was the favorite at about even money over the field, Grenoble with the second choice. The horses had a very uneven start, occasioned by the vicious temper of The Bencher, who delayed the start for half an hour. When the drum was tapped by General Buford, Misdeal had a good deal the best of the send off, Goldmine second, Grenoble third, The Bencher fourth, Aaron Pennington fifth, Goldsberg sixth, Georgie Bowman seventh and Carrie Anderson eighth. There was no change of place around the turn, nor along the backstretch until past the half pole, when Goldmine went to the front, Aaron Pennington closing up and taking second place, Grenoble third, Misdeal fourth, The Bencher fifth, Goldsberg sixth, Georgie Bowman seventh, Carrie Anderson eighth. As the horses approached the three-quarter pole, and when Aaron Pennington was lapped on Goldmine he grappled his off forequarter and instantly fell off again to fifth place. This accident lost Pennington the race, as the others got away from him so far before he began running again that his chances were entirely gone. Misdeal ran to the front on the homestretch, and won the race by a length, Goldmine second, half a length in front of Grenoble, Aaron Pennington fourth, Georgie Bowman fifth, The Bencher sixth, Goldsberg seventh and Carrie Anderson eighth. Time of the mile, 1:43½.

MATE AT NEWMARKET.

In reference to the performance of Mr. M. H. Sanford's bay horse, Mate in the City and Suburban, run at Newmarket 25th ult., the London Sportsman says:—

An object of some attention in the paddock was the American horse Mate, who was supported at Newmarket last week on behalf of his owner. Without seeming to carry so much flesh as did Preakness in his engagement at headquarters, Mate yet looked decidedly on the big side, though we are told that in America the horses have invariably run when in that condition. Mate was one of the most powerful horses ever seen at Epsom, but it is evident that the foreigners have not speed to compete with the English thoroughbreds, though on longer courses one or two of Mr. Sanford's champions may win races, and it is to be hoped that the team will not return to America without proving victorious on this side of the Atlantic, for the owner has shown the greatest amount of enterprise in sending a lot of race horses to England.

THUNDER'S GREAT PERFORMANCE.

The performance of Mr. H. F. C. Vyner's bay horse Thunder in winning the City and Suburban at Newmarket, with 130 lbs. up, calls forth special comment by the London Sportsman, 26th ult., the day following the event. It says:—

Thunder's performance in the City and Suburban was that of a great horse, and one entitling him to take the highest rank among the most remarkable of our handicap winners. Heavy weights have been carried to the front in many of the most important races, and old horses with big imposts have beaten highly-tried juveniles before to-day, but in connection with the City and Suburban there was no precedent for the achievement of Thunder. Argonaut won (1865) under 123 lbs., and although nineteen finished behind the late Sir Joseph Hawley's son of Stockwell, the three-year-olds were scarcely so leniently treated as the immediate attendants of Thunder; for when Argonaut won The Grinder, who was second, had 86 lbs., and Swordsman, the third, a pound less. A grand horse like Knight of the Garter could get no nearer than third to Speculum (1868) and Abergeldie (1867) with 127 lbs. on his back, yet he won the Chester Cup with that identical weight. Cremorne's performance under 128 lbs. at Epsom in Mornington's year was a smart one, but that of Thunder has eclipsed them all, for he won in a canter, the distance in his favor being three lengths. Thunder is by Thunderbolt out of Violante, a mare by Melbourne out of Stitch, and he was bred by Mr. Alexander, the dam dying the year after foaling Thunder, who during his career has won nineteen races, of the value of £6,195. The late Baron Rothschild claimed him out of a selling races at Newmarket for £1,000 on behalf of the Duke of St. Albans and Matthew Dawson, who won some race with him, and then sold the horse to Mr. Vyner for £2,000, the chief reason of the purchase being to get a horse to lead Camballo in his work last year. Archer deserves a word of praise for the way in which he handled the winner, who must be regarded as a wonder, for it is impossible to think that those who finished behind him represented a moderate lot of horses. Thunder is engaged in the great Cheshire Stakes at Cheshire, for which the imposts have not yet been made known.

A NEW YACHT.

Mr. Willis, of Port Washington, has just launched a new open sloop named the "Thomas Paine," which he intends to enter in the Centennial regatta. Her dimensions are as follows:—Water and deck line, each 27 feet 7¾ inches; keel, 7 inches deep by 11 inches wide depth of trunk, 3 feet 6 inches; beam, 12 feet 9¾ inches; centre board, 9 feet 2 inches long; stern post 4 feet 6 inches; stern, 3 feet 9 inches; cock pit, 12 feet 8 inches long. She is to be rigged with jib and mainsail, and will have her mast stepped this week. She is to have a suit of racing sails supplied by John Sawyer, similar to those worn by the Maude, W. T. Lee, Brooklyn and other well known flyers. She is to make a trial trip on Saturday next, and will fly the pennant of the New Rochelle Yacht Club.

YACHTING NOTE.

Yacht West Wind, N.Y.Y.C., from the eastward passed Whitestone yesterday in tow for New York.

BASE BALL NOTES.

The Mutuals defeated the Bostons at Boston yesterday—5 to 1—the "Reds" not scoring until the last inning. At Philadelphia the Hartfords again defeated the Athletics, the score being 7 to 4.

The Mutuals and Hartfords play on the Union Grounds this afternoon.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS TOURNAMENT.

For several weeks past a match in which the most famous players of America and England will be brought together has been under consideration. On Saturday next Mr. Alberoni will leave for England and will carry with him papers authorizing him to arrange all the preliminaries of the match. Immediately upon his arrival he will deposit the sum of $500 in reliable hands, and will then, acting as the agent of the players in New York, challenge the best players in England to compete with those in America. By a special arrangement with the cable company they agree to send three moves of the contending parties each day, and it is believed that if this contract is fulfilled the match will be decided in less than two weeks.

AMERICAN PLAYERS.

Messrs. McKenzie, Mason, Richardson, Barnett, Brenzingar and Delmar will control the American game, while the English will be under the direction of the most celebrated players that the West End Club can bring together. The entire expense of the match is assumed by Mr. Lieders.

In addition to the prize money, a medal has been offered by Mr. Sheliha, upon one side of which is an appropriate tribute to the victor, and upon the other side of which will be represented upon a chess board of black and white enamel the successful move of the final game.

WHAT MR. MULLEN MAY DO.

YONKERS, May 7, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In your Sunday edition I noticed a challenge from Edward Mullen stating that he is ready to make a match with Brown, Smith or Oddy. Now, what I wish to say is that, while Oddy was in Yonkers prior to going to Chicago word was sent to Mr. Mullen to come to Yonkers to get on a match with Oddy, which he promised to do, but did not put in an appearance. Now, if Mr. Mullen is willing to make a match with Oddy and to show business, let him deposit $100 in the hands of the New York Clipper and it will be immediately covered; or let him come to Yonkers and he can be accommodated for $100 or upward.

TRIPLE SHEET.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, MAY 9, 1876.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be cooler and partly cloudy, with coast rains, clearing up later.

NOTICE TO COUNTRY NEWSDEALERS.—For prompt and regular delivery of the HERALD by fast mail trains orders must be sent direct to this office. Postage free.

WALL STREET YESTERDAY.—Stocks were largely manipulated by professionals, with results that will be found elsewhere. Few of the outside community are involved. Gold advanced to 112 3-4, but closed at the opening price, 112 5-8. Investment shares were quiet, government bonds in fair request and railway bonds without material change. Money loaned at 3 and 3 1-2 per cent on stock collaterals.

COLONEL GORDON, THE AFRICAN EXPLORER, has abandoned his proposed expedition to the interior, owing, it is said, to lack of funds. We fear that the exploration of Central Africa must become, after all, an exclusively American enterprise.

SEVERAL CITY MARSHALS, nominated by the Mayor, were yesterday confirmed by the Board of Aldermen. We earnestly trust that these new officials will be more particular about charging legal fees—and nothing more—than were the cormorants who were their predecessors.

A DISMAL STORY OF SHIPWRECK reaches us from London by cable. The French fishing fleet engaged in the Arctic seas has, it is feared, been entirely destroyed, the rescued crews of the Emma, of Dunkirk, having reported the loss of six fishing vessels besides their own. It is to be hoped, however, that the crews may have escaped to some of the islands of the Orkney or Hebrides groups.

RAPID TRANSIT.—Of course if we are to have an elevated railroad some persons must be inconvenienced. We cannot have our cake and eat it. Therefore, the applications made to the courts for injunctions must be looked upon as mere matters of selfishness or demands for damages. But no matter what temporary injury may be experienced by individuals, the general public gain by rapid transit is the supreme interest, and dominates all others. The community demands rapid transit, and those few who have their profit in slow travel must get out of the road of New York progress. We trust the courts will, in the present case, so decide.

THE IRISH RIFLEMEN are trying their skill at the butts to determine who shall compose the Centennial team. The second contest for places on the team took place at Dundalk on Saturday, during which Mr. W. Rigby made the magnificent score of 211 out of a possible 225. Such fine shooting will doubtless have the effect of stimulating other contestants to greater efforts, and we may safely count on having a team from Ireland that will be worth defeating, and our marksmen will no doubt experience in meeting them "that stern joy which warriors feel in foemen worthy of their steel."

THE IMPEACHMENT TRIAL.—Mr. Hoar made an argument in support of the jurisdiction of the Senate over Mr. Belknap. Judge Black has thus far replied with sarcasm and recrimination. We suggest to Judge Black that he should stick to the point and show less wit and humor and a little more reason. A grave question, such as that before the Senate, is not to be determined by mere smartness. It ought to be decided without partisanship and in the sole interests of the American people. All the nation wants to know is what the constitution requires.

Tilden—Thurman—Bayard, the Democratic Triumvirs.

If any candidate wishes to attain to the Executive office because he believes he can serve the country more effectively there than any other man can; if his patriotic pride and indignation animate him against the horde of corrupt and unworthy creatures that wriggle through the whole body politic and eat away its vitality to such a degree that he believes none other will extirpate them with the necessary energy and earnestness; if he believes that his resolution, his will, his purpose, are especially what are needed in the crisis; if, in short, he wants the office for the service he can do in it, he is, by this reason alone, fit for the place. But if he wants it for any other reason whatever he is unfit for it. Any motive that is merely personal is a pitiful piece of intellectual furniture in the emergency that confronts the nation. Any other motive than the highest possible public purpose will not do in these times. If any man shall in these days secure the Presidency only to be the central source of its patronage he may be sure that he will be pilloried in infamy to the last day of our history as a people.

There are many men now before the country who, if they desire this office, may consistently be believed to desire it only with exalted motives, and distinguished among these are the democratic triumvirs, Tilden, Thurman and Bayard, the representatives respectively of the great sections of democratic strength. Every one of these men stands at a higher level morally and intellectually than is common in our public life. Ordinarily this would be a fatal defect, an insuperable obstacle to their candidacy, for the common politician resents superiority. He dreads the notion of the presence in office of any man of such quality that he will not be as plastic to his schemes as clay in the hands of the potter. Any intellect sufficient to see through his schemes, and any morality or sense of duty robust enough to put them out of doors, are all that he has to dread in this world; and he battles day and night against the candidacy of men endowed with such attributes. How common this sentiment is with this ordinarily omnipotent class may be seen in the tone with which some time ago they treated the proposition to nominate Mr. Adams. They sneered at it as "respectable." They filled their local journals with sarcastic references to "blue blood," and the editor of the Springfield Republican was laughed at from one end of the country to the other because he persistently declared his opinion that a gentleman of exceptional ability and culture and of great experience in our politics was a thoroughly fit man to be President. This sort of opinion originates with the men who want a dummy in office, who want to wind him up and set the hands at what hour they please. Men of this class in the republican party surrounded and captured the President now in office at a very early period, and the whole order throughout the land has been made hungry by the instances of their success that recent investigations have exhibited. But the men of this sort in both parties have begun to see very clearly that the present canvass is one in which the people mean to take part, and they reason that they must give up for a time those tactics which they may indulge with safety when the people are indifferent. They know that the party that nominates a dummy will be beaten, and that, if successful with a capable man, they may still hope and strive, but if beaten with any other they may go for four years where the woodbine twineth. Therefore the candidacy of men of exceptional ability is not impossible this year, and Mr. Tilden, Mr. Thurman or Mr. Bayard may any one of them come out of the St. Louis Convention half elected to the Presidency.

With men like these, men of high character and somewhat ripe experience, it may safely be assumed that mere personal ambition does not count for a great deal in the aspirations with which they contemplate the Presidency, for it is scarcely conceivable that men of accurate perceptions would choose to lie on the bed of Procrustes rather than on any other, merely because it is labelled with an honorable name. But men will venture that bed, or even a worse fate, in devotion to the public service; and we have not the slightest doubt that any one of these gentlemen if elected would administer the Presidential office in the spirit of such devotion. Devotion, however, does not attach undue importance to details; it rather, indeed, contemplates them with some indifference, and concentrates its attention upon essentials; and if three great democrats are resolute to serve the country in a perilous emergency; if they are equally determined to do their utmost to purify the public service, to re-establish the standard of our republican system, to save from insidious enemies a form of government upon which depends the liberties of forty millions of people; if this is their purpose, and they address themselves to the labor only to secure the success of this grand purpose, it is, after all, only a detail which of them shall be nominally foremost—whether any one of them, for instance, in signing his name to a document that confounds the plans of scoundrels shall sign it as President or as Secretary. It is reported by Arrian that when the Queen of Persia was conducted to the tent of Alexander she entered, and, by a natural mistake, as the persons of the Greeks were of course unknown to her, threw herself at the feet of Hephæstion and there appealed for the grace of the conqueror; but when she saw her error the King relieved her embarrassment with the famous words "Hephæstion is also an Alexander." This was in the spirit of heroic fellowship worthy the men and the occasion—a spirit that did not stand upon the dignities of office and points of personal precedency; and thus it should matter little with the great democrats which is Hephæstion and which is Alexander if all labor together in the common heroic effort against the enemy.

With Mr. Tilden in the Executive chair and Thurman and Bayard in the Cabinet, or with either Thurman or Bayard in the Executive chair and the two thus excluded from that office supporting him in the Cabinet, every great section of the democratic party would feel equally assured of its influence upon the government. This, in fact, would only be giving effect to the principle that underlies all constitutional government—that the administration is formally and officially put into the hands of those leading, capable and important men of every section into whose hands the offices would naturally and necessarily fall if the government were an oligarchy. This was the recognized principle of our system in its period of early purity and vigor. If it had been possible, when the first President of the United States was named, for the nation to choose any other man than George Washington the choice would have laid between Adams, Jefferson and Hamilton, and President Washington put both Jefferson and Hamilton into his Cabinet, and if Adams had not been Vice President he would have had him in also. That was a principle so well founded in the nature of governments like ours that it scarcely needed the consecration of this example to commend it to later administrations. It was less liberally applied to all the great men of the country when the people divided into parties for and against the views of different interpreters of the constitution, for neither party would have accepted the presence of a man in the government opposed to its principles; but this made the point all the clearer that the government must have the support of all the great men of its party, and it would have been properly regarded as an impolitic and dangerous course for any administration to deprive itself of such elements as come with the presence of all those party leaders who have the respect of the nation in such a degree that they are regarded as rival candidates. Indeed, we have already noted—and it is familiar to the country—how distinctly this principle was put into practice in the case of President Lincoln and his great Secretary, William H. Seward. In fact, this principle never was openly scorned in our history except by President Grant. He introduced the usage of making his Cabinet a coterie; of choosing men to perform the functions of great political offices—not for their fitness or acquaintance with the duties, but because they were personally agreeable to himself. This is so much the opposite to the system upon which our government rests that a great orator happily compared the President's plan in this respect to the plan of George III. This plan was the source of one-half the evils that have troubled the government since, as in George III.'s hands it produced still greater evils in the English government.

In the present crisis, however, it is not so much that the President put in office will be eager to get the assistance of experience and capacity in the administration. That he will need, whoever he is. But it is that as the sectional issue has reached an excessive prominence in our politics, as it has made a great and bloody war, it will continue in Presidential elections an element of mistrust and uncertainty, and will therefore stimulate each section to a renewed endeavor to secure for itself the great post of executive authority, and these efforts will only be remitted. A harmonious concentration on a great man of one or another section will only be possible when the other sections shall receive the guarantee of one of the great posts that are part and parcel of the collective executive office. Unless one section's support of the candidate of another section is guarded by this condition it will withhold that support, and no great leader can be nominated; but an intrigue will be formed, the party nomination will be given to some pygmy, and the party will be beaten.

The Piper Murders.

The confession of Piper, the murderer of Mabel Young—which the HERALD announced yesterday in advance of the other papers—comes upon the public with startling effect. On the very eve of his confession a motion had been made for a new trial, and only a few weeks ago he had written a letter filled with protestations of his innocence. It was a letter rich in Scriptural reminiscence, abounding in pious quotations, and explaining his terrible position on the ground that he had endeavored, in his cowardice, to escape the charge of murder by a falsehood. This feeble defence failed. Yet it is to be admitted that the circumstantial evidence against Piper was not sufficient to convince the public of his guilt. If he had been hanged while declaring his innocence the people might have supposed him to be the victim of a mistake. But, happily, any doubts of the kind are extinguished. The man has not only confessed that he murdered Mabel Young in the belfry, but that he was the assailant of Mary Tyner and also the murderer of Bridget Landregan.

There can be little pity for this unhappy man. He accuses himself of monstrosity, of a thirst for blood and torture, which was inflamed by opium and whiskey. This is a confession which, it is very plausibly said, is intended to convey the impression that his crimes were the result of insanity or uncontrollable impulses, induced by intoxicating drinks. But this story will not do. A few weeks ago this heartless criminal had the insolence to write a treacherous letter, filled with Sunday school expressions, in which he professed his affection for children, and actually had the effrontery to lament over the death of Mabel Young. Now the contemptible scoundrel admits that he killed Mabel Young and Bridget Landregan, and attempts to escape the rope on the plea that he was urged by an uncontrollable desire for blood, inspired by the influence of opium and rum. This plea of irresponsible insanity will not excuse the brutal and heartless assassin. He has displayed too much sanity in his own defence to be considered a lunatic in his apologies. If ever any one deserved to be put out of the world it is, perhaps, this wretched being, who, according to his own statement, has a thirst for blood, and, according to the known facts, has an insatiable appetite for the lives of innocent children. Even those who are not in favor of capital punishment in general, and who do not consider it a reformatory agent in society, can hardly regret the time when this hypocrite and monster, the murderer of children, the assassin of the innocent and pure, shall swing upon the gallows, and rid the world of one more wretch who is unfit to live.

The Centennial Exhibition—The Opening To-Morrow.

Never, perhaps, since the workmen began the Tower of Babel has there been so much energy and enthusiasm as is now seen in happy, nervous, expectant Philadelphia, "all in a tremble," if we may use the phrase, about her Centennial Exhibition which is to open to-morrow. Although they have been four years about it, where so many things are to be done much will be delayed until the last moment. The tendency to procrastinate is so attractive that we feel its influence in all undertakings of this magnitude and character. Our correspondents inform us that many of the departments are well advanced and that the opening day will witness a much more complete display than was seen in Vienna. There is some comfort in this, although we could wish that many of our Americans had been further ahead. They have none of the excuses that are found sometimes in distance, the danger of sea travel and the difficulty of exciting the interest in a foreign country. America should have been nearly as bright and new as a pin a week before the opening day. As it now stands we are in a tumbled up condition. Some of the exhibits are behind and some ahead. Some of the special displays are very fine, others have no attractiveness. Some are representations of skill and taste and industry, others mere catchpenny advertisements. The foreign nations are generally rich and unique. We are glad to hear that the South American countries are doing so well. These nations, with their most interesting civilization, who represent an influence on this continent as important as our own, will make a finer display in Philadelphia than in London, Paris or Vienna. We wish that Mexico were further advanced, but before many days are over we are in hopes our sister Republic will show us something of the glory which gave their nation a splendor outdating that of the Saxon North.

Next to the United States the country holding the most important place in the Exhibition is Great Britain. The English government has shown a magnanimity and generosity in this Centennial affair worthy of special recognition. No one presumed for a moment that the English government would do anything that was not sensible and hearty in an exhibition of an international character. The interests of the two countries are too varied and important to be slighted in behalf of any sentiment that might exist as to the centennial year and the event it commemorates. Speaking as Americans, we think we may say that there is no memory of a hundred years but what brings with it respect for the valor and persistence of England, and especially for the stubborn, high-spirited and conscientious King who perilled his crown and kingdom to save his American empire. The English, so far from showing coldness and indifference, have entered into our fair with as much zeal as though it were under their own and not an alien flag. If we note this specially it is not in a spirit of wonder, but of recognition. And why should England not rejoice in the Centennial fair? In the largest sense this is an English fair. As our correspondent expressed it the other day, Mother England sits within the sunlit palace of glass and iron, her brood of colonies nestled under her wings, her grandeur manifest to all eyes, a living expression of the strength of an Empire upon which the sun never sets. But there is none of her colonies or possessions—Canada, with her fresh and sinewy strength; Australia, with her mountain of gold, its value summed up to a sixpence, or India, rich in gold and silk and gems—there is none of them whose history speaks with so much eloquence of the glory of England as the United States. For we owe what we are as a free Christian people to the lessons we learned from the venerable Mother Land. Her presence in the Centennial palace is a most gratifying event, and we are proud to think that in all the essentials of a world's fair her exhibition, in point of variety and extent, is second only to our own.

As we have said, never since the Tower of Babel has there been so busy a multitude as the builders of the Centennial Exposition. We are afraid, from what we hear in the newspapers, that its experience will be like that of Babel in the trouble which came from the confusion of tongues. We hear of clashing and trouble. There are complaints, mutinies, dissents. The government of the Exposition is three-headed, and the three heads are General Hawley, General Goshorn and Mr. Welsh. Of course where there are three captains there is generally a council of quarrelsome commanders and a mutinous following. So we have controversies about the newspapers whose "rights" are infringed, about the selling of liquor within the gates, about Sunday and twenty other points. We trust that as the direction have done so well thus far there will be no quarrels, no dissent. Let us have one celebration untainted by scandal. What everybody wants is a good Exhibition, and this would seem to be easy even to a three-headed commission. As to the journalists who complain about "invaded rights," our advice to the commission is that they give every journalist the "right" to pay his way and permit him to mind his own business. This is all we ask for our own part, and beg the commission to give themselves no trouble about us whatever.

To-morrow, however, will be the great day—the day which has filled so large a space in the imagination of the people of Philadelphia and the nation. From all we learn the display will be much more advanced, and in many respects much more attractive and interesting than has ever been seen before. We congratulate our sister city and our sister State upon what their citizens have done. It is a triumph the credit of which is largely their own, but in the honor of which we are proud to share.

THE BERGEN EXPLOSION.—The strikers at the Bergen tunnel lie on the Jersey City bluffs, smoke their pipes and accuse the newspapers of meanness in suggesting that some of them exploded the magazine last Saturday night. But they are wrong. They are justly suspected of this terrible crime. They have attempted to control non-strikers by violence; they have driven men away from the work needed to support their families; they have threatened to effect their ends by murder. Suspicion naturally attaches to them, and it would be wise for those who were not principals in the explosion to make a clean breast of the affair at once.

Secretary Fish on the Extradition Treaty.

Mr. Fish's long despatch, which we print this morning, is even a greater "sockdolleger" in its way than President Grant's recent Message in reply to the inquisition of the House into his absence from the seat of government. The two documents resemble each other in a crushing array of facts which renders the opposing opinion ridiculous; but Secretary Fish has outdone his chief in handling this most effective of controversial weapons. Mr. Fish's answer to the British demand is a réponse sans réplique, or, at least, we do not see how any possible ingenuity can even blunt the impression it is calculated to make. It puts the British government so palpably in the wrong that the despatch must produce an explosive effect when it comes to be read in England. It will give such a handle to Mr. Disraeli's adversaries in Parliament that it may lead to the overthrow of his Ministry, already weakened by other blunders. Be that as it may, Mr. Fish has demolished the British pretence as to the meaning of the treaty of 1842 as completely as any unfounded pretence can be demolished by facts and argument.

The language of the treaty is plain enough, but it so happens that it has been judicially construed by so many tribunals and so many able experts in this branch of public law that Mr. Fish has a tremendous advantage in the argument beyond that which he would possess if this point were now raised for the first time and he were not supported by a great body of adjudications and authorities. The ingenuity of astute criminal lawyers retained by the defence in desperate cases may always be relied on to discover every crotchet or sophistry which may be turned to the advantage of their clients, and it has been argued over and over again in behalf of prisoners destitute of any other defence that they could be tried under the treaty of 1842 only for the specific offence for which they were extradited. This plea, as Mr. Fish shows, has been overruled again and again by the courts of justice, not only of this country, but of England, of Upper Canada, of Lower Canada and of New Brunswick. Mr. Fish cites the cases and gives the names of the judges, and the uniformity of decision among tribunals so various is a conclusive proof that the treaty does not admit of any reasonable difference of interpretation. Beside the concurrence of enlightened and responsible courts of justice, Mr. Fish has other testimony of almost equal weight. This subject was investigated several years ago by an able committee of Parliament, who summoned before them the most skilful experts in this branch of inquiry, and on the point in question the same view was held which has been affirmed by the tribunals of Great Britain and her North American provinces, as well as by the courts and law officers of this country. Beside this strong array of authorities, which Mr. Fish recites in detail, he calls attention to the fact that soon after the act of 1870 our government addressed a note to Sir Edward Thornton, informing him that it understood the twenty-seventh section of that act as excepting the treaty of 1842 from its operation, and that our extradition arrangements with Great Britain remained on their former basis. As the British government took no exception to that note we were entitled to regard its failure to object as acquiescence; and it is surprising that it now suddenly rejects all that it has heretofore assented to on that subject.

What is the motive for this strange somerset? We hinted at it a week or two since in so significant a way that one of our contemporaries indiscreetly called upon Congress to investigate us and find out the facts of which we seemed to be in possession. If Congress wants to investigate anybody let it summon Mr Fish, for it is evident from this despatch that he is acquainted with the same facts at which the HERALD hinted. He, indeed, expresses himself with the same caution which we thought it prudent to observe, but the substance of his intimations is identical with ours. Referring to the case of Lawrence, Mr. Fish says:—"It is supposed that prosecution of these cases might possibly disclose names on either side of the Atlantic in connection with the alleged frauds not yet brought before the public." Stripped of its diplomatic reserve, this is a suggestion, almost a charge, that the exposures which might attend the trial of Lawrence are the reason for the sudden and astonishing change of attitude by the Disraeli Ministry. When this is proved to be the fact the fall of that Ministry will be only a question of hours, or, at most, of days, not of weeks.

The Central Park.

As we have now a new management in the Park Department it may be well to revive the question whether the splendid grass plots of the Central Park should not be thrown open to the public and devoted this summer to the recreation of the people instead of being kept for show and for the profit, to somebody or other, of sheep grazing. In all the parks of Europe the people are at liberty to walk over the grass and the children are permitted to make the grass plots their playgrounds. Why should we not have the same privileges in New York? What satisfaction is it to the tens of thousands who visit the Central Park to see the tempting verdure and to be met at every turn by the notice "Keep off the grass?" Let us have something like common sense in our park management and let every inch of the ground in Central Park be devoted to the use of the masses. The Park is of no value to the people if it is to be an iron bound parade ground in which the visitors are to be restricted to the hot, dusty gravel paths, and in which every child whose exuberant spirits leads it to make a plunge among the daisies is to be subjected to the rebuke of a Limerick gentleman in gray uniform.

MISS DICKINSON'S DEBUT.—The story of Miss Anna Dickinson's first appearance on the stage last night is told in our Boston correspondence. She was received by an exceptional audience, not inferior to that which welcomed and supported the production of Mr. Tennyson's "Queen Mary" in London, and has no cause to complain of the result of her enterprise. But it is evident that Miss Dickinson did not achieve a genuine success as an actress, although her abilities as an author could not be entirely hidden. The stage is a strict mistress. It is like Rome, which could not be conquered in a day. The stage exacts long servitude, as Rachel required a courtship of twice seven years from Jacob, and no special preparation in other professions will compensate for the lack of direct experience. Miss Dickinson seems to have been intellectual, but ineffective. Yet let it be considered that last night was her first appearance, and that it would hardly be generous to absolutely judge her by one performance.

Dom Pedro.

It is to be regretted that our illustrious visitor has not been able to devote more time to his visit to the United States, but the cause unfortunately lies not within the province of human will to alter. His Majesty's present voyage has been chiefly undertaken with a view to the re-establishment of the health of the Empress. Her Majesty, by the advice of her physicians, is about to seek restoration to health at the waters of Gastein. The time appointed by her medical advisers for taking the waters is toward the end of July, and Their Majesties' departure from the United States will have to be regulated with a view to the arrival of the Empress at the German waters at that time.

His Majesty was, therefore, reluctantly compelled to put off his visit until such time as the seasons would allow Her Majesty to come into the northern latitudes without risk. It would, however, be a mistake to assume that His Majesty's tour through the country is unproductive because made rapidly. The facilities everywhere placed at his disposal by the prominent manufacturers enable him to see more in a given time than could any ordinary traveller. Then, His Majesty has made it his custom through life to acquaint himself with the various industrial processes in every branch of manufactures, and therefore, when new methods are presented to his observation he is able to form an intelligent opinion without the need of that lengthened examination which would be indispensable to one whose powers of observation were less developed. There is, therefore, but little danger that our illustrious visitor will carry away unsound opinions as to the social or industrial organization of our people. Hitherto, it is true, he has seen little of their social life, but that was owing to the necessity of completing his California trip before the opening of the Centennial Exhibition.

Although desirous of avoiding anything like public receptions during his stay in this country His Majesty took an early opportunity to distinguish between public and social receptions. On several occasions he has said that, though he would steadfastly refuse to be speeched at and fêted by public bodies, he would willingly accept such invitations to American society as might be offered to him as a Brazilian gentleman whose name was not unknown to the outside world when the acceptance of such invitations would not interfere with the more important work of studying the industrial progress of our people. So far His Brazilian Majesty has shown himself thoroughly consistent in his action. He is the first crowned monarch who has visited the young Republic, and has known how to win the respect and esteem of our citizens by the more than republican simplicity of his life, as well as the sound common sense with which he shows himself to be endowed. We venture, however, to hope that during the time that still remains to him His Majesty will find frequent opportunity to study the social life of our people in the homes of our citizens.

THE MURDERERS' LEAGUE.

DAMNING EXPOSURES OF THE INNER WORKINGS OF THE MOLLIE MAGUIRES—DIABOLICAL INTRIGUES—BARTERING BLOOD.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., May 8, 1876.

This has been the most exciting day in the most important case ever brought to trial in any court in the anthracite coal fields. The case is that of the five Mollie Maguires—Boyle, Duffy, Carroll, McGeehan and Roarity, charged with the murder of Policeman Yost, of Tamaqua.

At an early hour the court room was crowded with an excited audience, among whom could be noted the faces of men known to belong to the A. O. H. The Court ordered a large force of coal and iron police to be sworn in as court officers and tipstaves to preserve order and guard the prisoners. The only witness examined was the detective, McParlan, of the Pinkerton Agency. He laid open of the A. O. H. in this county. He detailed how he joined the society, and how he was made to go upon his knees and swear to an oath called "The test." None but Catholic Irishmen or their descendants are ever admitted to membership. The members distinguish one another by signs and passwords, which are known as "Goods." The society is divided into divisions, each officered by a chief officer, called a body master. From him the trusted members get the passwords and signs. He gets them from the county delegate, who gets them from the State delegate, to whom they are furnished by the national delegate or national board in the city of New York. They originate with "The Board of Erin," a body which holds quarterly meetings in England, Scotland or Ireland. These signs and passwords are changed quarterly, and are transmitted to America by a man who is a steward on one of the ships of the Inman line. The various members know each other to be in good standing by the interchange of these signs and passwords, and the witness testified to having attended various county conventions of the Order, and gave the names of a large number of persons belonging to it.

A GREAT SENSATION

was created in court when the detective swore that a man named Patrick Collins, at present holding the very important office of County Commissioner, was body master of a division of Mollie Maguires in Palo Alto. This sensation was heightened when President F. B. Gowen, of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, who is a volunteer counsel for the Commonwealth, said he would prove that Collins had secreted murderers, and had, within a few days made a visit for which he would be called to account before the Court. He had also placed one of his emissaries in the jail as watchman, with keys to the cells of prisoners. Mr. Gowen exonerated the the Ancient Order of Hibernians outside of the coal fields from any knowledge of a participation in crime, but boldly charged that in Schuylkill county at least the Order had degenerated into a society worse than the thugs of India, whose object was deliberate murder, arson, robbery and the prevention of the detection of crime. Among its members the commission of murder was the title to distinction and pecuniary reward. Hereafter, to be a member of that society in this county will be regarded as ex-officio—an evidence of criminal guilt. The detective testified that if any member of the Order gave any information which might lead to the prevention or detection of crime he would be immediately expelled.

THE METHOD OF MURDER.

The modus operandi in the case of a contemplated murder was explained. The person aggrieved states his case to his body master and asks consent for the murder. If the consent is given the body master examines his men to find some one personally unknown to the contemplated victim. If he cannot find any such he makes application to the body master of some neighboring division, giving a personal guarantee that the favor will be reciprocated at any time. In accordance with this plan McGeehan and Boyle came over from Carbon county to murder Yost, with the distinct understanding that the Tamaqua division were to furnish men to kill John P. Jones, of Carbon county. The agreement was carried out to the letter. Yost had offended Duffy, one of the prisoners, and Jones had incurred the enmity of McGeehan by refusing him work in the mine of which he had charge. The murder of Jones was the thirty pieces of silver paid for the murder of Yost. For the clean job McGeehan made in Yost's murder the society set him up in the liquor business in Summit Hill. It is not possible to describe the excitement in the court room when this damning exposure was going on. The various members of the society present were very white in the face. The detective coolly exposed their secret signs and passwords. Good citizens were rejoiced, as they believe the events of this trial will certainly work the destruction of the Mollie Maguire power.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE, NORTH.

THE PRELUDE OF A STORM OVER THE AFFAIRS OF THE WESTERN BOOK CONCERN—EXCITEMENT AND INDIGNATION—THE CHURCH DECLARED TO BE SWINDLED.

BALTIMORE, May 8, 1876.

Bishop Foster presided at the opening of the Conference this morning.

Immediately after religious services, Dr. Hitchcock, Sr., agent of the Book Concern at Cincinnati, rose to a question of privilege, and inquired of the Secretary why and through whom the paper presented to the Conference by Dr. Lanahan on Saturday last, in reference to the Western Book Concern, had been furnished the Associated Press.

The Secretary, Rev. Mr. Woodruff, disclaimed any knowledge as to its having been given out. He had not furnished it.

Dr. Hitchcock proceeded with earnestness and warmth to comment on the memorial presented by Dr. Lanahan on Saturday last charging the insolvency of the Western Book Concern and contending that the allegations of the memorial were untrue. Dr. Hitchcock contended that the report of the committee, showing the assets of the Western Book Concern exceeded its liabilities over $500,000, was strictly correct. He said the reports of two different examiners of the Western Book Concern agreed in every particular in establishing the correctness of the exhibit of the Book Committee. The only disagreement (which was a small matter) was as to the value of the real estate held by the Concern, which, Dr. Hitchcock said, was undervalued instead of overvalued.

Amos Shinkle and Dr. Walden, Jr., agent of the Western Book Concern, rose successively to questions of privilege, and earnestly protested against the statement made in the memorial.

Dr. Walden said the attack on the Western Book Concern was a blow at its credit, and the statement charging its insolvency given to the press (we know not how) was full of misrepresentations. He read a statement of profits of the several agencies of the Western Book Concern, showing its sound condition. At the conclusion of his remarks Dr. Walden offered the following:—

> Whereas the memorial in regard to our publishing interests, presented on Saturday through Dr. Lanahan, and signed by C. Herbert Richardson, John Miller, John Baer and Jesse C. Warfield, contained damaging statements touching the financial condition of the Western Book Concern at Cincinnati; and whereas these damaging statements, in some way communicated to the press, have been made public to the detriment of said concern; therefore,
> Resolved, That the Committee on the Book Concern is hereby instructed to consider the subject of said memorial, and report at the earliest moment practicable upon the financial condition of the Western Methodist Book Concern.

After some debate Dr. Walden's resolution was adopted.

Several memorials were presented and referred.

Adjourned until to-morrow.

A MINOR SIOUX EXPEDITION.

FORT LARAMIE, Wy. T., May 8, 1876.

Captain Egan, with his own command, Company K, of the Second cavalry, and Company F, of the Ninth infantry, under Lieutenant Rogers—100 good fighting men in all—left here this morning for the scenes of the late Indian troubles on the Cheyenne River and in Red Canyon. They are efficient officers, and will be apt to make it lively for the Indians if they have an opportunity. This little expedition will afford some measure of safety to persons going to the Black Hills. Captain Egan expects to be absent about three weeks. Lieutenant Robertson, of the Ninth infantry, and acting Assistant Surgeon Petteys accompany the expedition.

Dr. Rufus A. Cobb, of Minot, was arrested on the 5th inst., charged with murder by malpractice of Mrs. Eliza Caldwell, of Oxford, who died at his house. He was taken to Mechanics' Falls and put on trial.

DOM PEDRO.

HIS MAJESTY AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL—VISIT TO THE PRESIDENT AND THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—EXPRESSION OF GRATIFICATION AT WHAT HE SAW AND HEARD.

WASHINGTON, May 8, 1876.

Before breakfast this morning the Emperor, accompanied by his suite, visited the Smithsonian Institution, where he was received by Professor Henry, who showed the imperial party through the building devoted to the cultivation of science. Owing to the great number of important specimens which have been forwarded to the Philadelphia Exhibition, the collection did not appear to as much advantage as it otherwise would have done. His Majesty was, however, well pleased with the arrangement and working of the institution as explained to him by Professor French. It would be difficult to say whether the Emperor or the Professor enjoyed most the visit. When the time arrived for taking leave Professor Henry said to the HERALD correspondent:—

"The Emperor is the most extraordinary man I ever met. His acquaintance with men and scientific matters is astonishing;" and the Professor evidently meant just what he said.

The Emperor, in leaving, expressed a hope that he would meet Professor Henry at Philadelphia.

AT THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

After breakfast the Emperor visited the House of Representatives, where he occupied for some time a seat in the gallery. He was introduced to S. S. Cox and Representatives Faulkner, Springer and Williams, of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

At half-past one P. M. His Majesty, accompanied by the Visconde de Bom Retiro, Dr. Macedo and the Brazilian Minister, called upon General Grant at the White House. The visit was wholly informal, and the visitors were at once ushered into the blue parlor. After a short delay the President, accompanied by Secretary Fish, entered the room. His Majesty rose upon the President's entrance, and his example was immediately followed by his suite. Secretary Fish introduced the Emperor, who presented his suite, and, after the exchange of the usual courtesies, President Grant invited the Emperor and suite to enter the red chamber, where the ladies of the household were waiting to receive. There were present Mrs. General Grant, Mrs. Fish, Mrs. Colonel Fred. Grant and one of the President's younger sons. The President and Dom Pedro conversed together during the interview, while the Brazilian Minister devoted himself to Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Fish. The Visconde de Bom Retiro and Mrs. Fred Grant exchanged notes on European travel, the conversation being carried on in French and Spanish, which languages Mrs. Fred Grant speaks with fluency. After something more than half an hour had passed the Emperor rose and took his leave.

IN THE SENATE CHAMBER.

His Majesty next visited the Senate to be present at Senator Black's speech in defence of General Belknap. His Majesty occupied a place in the diplomatic gallery, and was the centre of observation during his stay. He listened with attention to Judge Black's speech, and, on leaving, said that the Judge spoke well and was evidently a clever and dexterous man. On his return to the hotel His Majesty had a pleasant who made a very good impression on the Emperor by his frank, soldierly bearing and witty conversation. After dinner His Majesty visited the government printing office, and in the evening he occupied a box at the National Theatre, where the Vokes family appeared in the "Belles of the Kitchen."

INTERVIEW WITH GENERAL SHERMAN,

In the morning His Majesty will visit the Corcoran Art Gallery. He will leave for Philadelphia by the 1:30 train, arriving in that city about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE EMPRESS IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8, 1876.

Her Imperial Majesty the Empress of Brazil visited the Academy of Notre Dame to-day. Pleasing exercises in her honor were given by the pupils.

THE LOSS OF THE SHIP NEPTUNE.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 8, 1876.

The schooner Vanilla arrived to-day from Sable Island with the captain and crew of the New York ship Neptune, recently wrecked on that island. The captain reports that the ship went ashore in a dense fog on the evening of the 12th of April. A landing was effected from three boats on the fourth day. The captain speaks very highly of the treatment they received on the island, the Governor of which chartered the schooner Vanilla to bring the shipwrecked people here. Nothing was saved from the Neptune.

WASHINGTON.

Persistent Efforts for the Release of an Imprisoned Irish Patriot.

THE EXPEDITION AGAINST THE INDIANS

A New Candidate for Nomination at St. Louis.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON, May 8, 1876.

THE CASE OF E. O'MEAGHER CONDON, THE IRISH PATRIOT—EFFORTS MADE FOR PROCURING HIS RELEASE—A POLITICAL MOVEMENT ON THE PART OF THE DEMOCRATS.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been much annoyed in the final disposition of cases brought before them, involving the imprisonment of American citizens by Great Britain, and the last of these, that of E. O'Meagher Condon, has given them no end of trouble, having been, in the language of one who is well informed, "a subject of diplomatic despatches continually for months past." The latest demonstration on this subject has taken shape in a huge petition, with the names of 1,627 Irish soldiers who served during the war, petitioning, with the Legislature of Kentucky, the Irish American citizens of St. Paul (Minn.). Irish Literary and Emerald Beneficial associations for the intervention of our government to secure the release of Mr. Condon, and these are to be followed by others of a similar character from other States. It is claimed that this case has been accorded an indecent, undue and partial notoriety; that, if the matter were allowed to rest, the Queen, on assuming her new title of Empress, would amnesty all prisoners, but that this pressure specially in favor of Mr. Condon will not dispose her favorably to this case, if, in fact, it will not have the effect to prejudice her against all of the kind.

The fact is that the democrats generally throughout the States have taken the subject up and are going to work it assiduously for political capital to be used in the coming campaigns where the Irish-American and foreign vote is to be catered to, with a view of securing its support. The State Department has been also importuned about it, and the amount of correspondence and telegraphing which has been created by it is almost incredible. When the Queen shall amnesty these alleged offenders both the Foreign Relations Committee and State Department signify that they will be relieved from the consideration of a subject which has been a continual bugbear to them for months past.

THE EFFECT OF MR. BLACK'S SPEECH ON THE IMPEACHMENT TRIAL—PROBABLE ACTION OF THE SENATE ON THE QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

By general acknowledgment Mr. Black did not make much impression to-day on the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment. From remarks which the democratic Senators made, dissenting from the position taken by Mr. Black, there is good reason to believe that they will be solidly against giving General Belknap the consideration of non-jurisdiction, and the prediction is made to night that the Senate will find that it has jurisdiction. The democrats will be solid in that direction and it is surmised that Senators Frelinghuysen, Edmunds, Wright and others of the republican lawyers will vote with the democrats.

It is urged that the necessity for trying Belknap is felt by the republicans in order to shield President Grant and the party from the odium of having accepted his resignation. Many of the Senators, it is said, will submit written opinions, which they are anxious to have go on the record. A decision will not, it is thought, be reached for two weeks to come.

THE CONNECTICUT SENATORSHIP—A MAJORITY OF THE DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS FOR BARNUM—SENATOR ENGLISH'S RECOMPENSE.

Information has reached Senator Eaton from Connecticut that Representative William H. Barnum will have, in the democratic legislative caucus to be held at Hartford on Tuesday evening, fully 100 votes out of a total of 180. There is likely to be some compensation for Senator English's ill-fortune at Hartford by a vigorous push for him as the Eastern candidate for the Presidency at St. Louis. A quiet dinner party was recently held at the Arlington, attended by Mr. English, A. E. Burr, editor of the Hartford Times; two Eastern members of the Democratic National Committee, Senators McCreary, of Kentucky, Bogy, of Missouri and others. When the question of the Presidential candidacy came up all concurred that Governor English would be a stronger candidate than Samuel J. Tilden, and it was contended that the Davenport testimony before Mr. Caulfield's Committee had so far complicated New York's favorite son in the conceded election frauds of New York city as to give the republicans a fatal advantage over Tilden. His famous "private and confidential" circular of October 27, 1868, when he was chairman of the Democratic State Committee, again brought before the public by Davenport, was also believed to be very damaging to Tilden's prospects and fatal to his election should he be nominated at St. Louis. Senator English, it was argued, would carry every doubtful and all democratic States, and thus secure the next administration to the democracy. The dinner party and its table talk have made quite a stir in political circles here.

THE EXPEDITION AGAINST THE INDIANS—PREPARATIONS IN PROGRESS FOR THE CAMPAIGN—TRIAL OF OFFICERS FOR ALLEGED MISCONDUCT.

General Crook, commanding the Department of the Platte, has nearly ready for the field another expedition against the Indians, and was expected several days since to start from Fort Fetterman, Wyoming Territory, May 15. No definite information has yet reached here as to the companies of troops selected, but they will be from the Second and Third cavalry, and Fourth, Ninth and Twenty-third infantry. A large number of cavalry recruits will be sent from New York city next Saturday, the 13th, direct to Omaha for assignment to companies composing the expedition, instead of first going to the cavalry recruiting rendezvous at St. Louis.

General Crook will start from Fort Fetterman and push for Powder River, thence to Big Horn River, and if necessary to the Yellowstone.

Two captains, who commanded companies during the late expedition to Powder River, have already been tried for misconduct during the operations, but the result of the trials has not yet been made known. The trials of Captain Anson Mills and Alexander Moore are now taking place, and that of General Reynolds, colonel of the Third cavalry, will come next.

THE RUMORED RESIGNATION OF SPEAKER KERR POSITIVELY DENIED.

The rumor that Mr. Kerr intended to resign the Speakership, which was brought from New York today, though not generally believed, caused a good deal of talk. It is false and without the least foundation. Mr. Morrison, who is one of the Speaker's most intimate friends, telegraphed him to know if there could be any truth in the report and received a reply this evening from Richmond, from Mr. Kerr, saying, "Not one word of truth." It is believed that the report was set going by some persons anxious to succeed to the Speakership, and that the wish was father to the thought. Mr. Kerr has been advised to take a little rest. He is now absent on a ten days' furlough, a part of which has expired, and at its conclusion he will ask for ten days more.

THE MISSISSIPPI INVESTIGATION—ACTION OF THE COMMITTEE.

Senator Boutwell says that the Senate Select Committee on outrages in Mississippi will not start for their field of operations in that State for a week to come. Having finished the examination of ex-Senator Kellogg, of Louisiana, they will examine Senator Bruce and representative Lynch, both of Mississippi, and some others. All their records and stationery have been prepared for some days, and it is evident Senator Boutwell intends business.

GENERAL WASHINGTON DESPATCH.

WASHINGTON, May 8, 1876.

THE HAWAIIAN TREATY—PASSAGE BY THE HOUSE OF THE BILL TO CARRY INTO EFFECT ITS PROVISIONS.

The bill to carry into effect the provisions of the treaty with the Hawaiian Islands passed the House to-day by a vote of 116 to 101. The bill, which was originally introduced by Mr. Luttrell, of California, provides for the President, whenever he has evidence that the Hawaiian Legislature has passed laws to give full effect to the treaty, issuing his proclamation, declaring the treaty of January 30, 1875, to be in effect, and that thereupon the following articles, being the growth and manufacture or produce of the Hawaiian Islands, shall be admitted into the United States free of duty:—Arrowroot, castor oil, bananas, nuts, vegetables, dried and undried, preserved and unpreserved; hides and skins, undressed; rice, pulu seeds, plants, shrubs or trees, Muscovado, brown and all other manufactured sugar, syrups of sugar cane, melado and molasses and tallow.

MR. BLAINE AND THE MARYLAND REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Reference has been made to a letter from Mr. Blaine that was in some way introduced in the Maryland Convention. The circumstances which led to the letter are these:—A prominent and distinguished republican of that State, a warm and personal friend of Mr. Blaine, wrote to him a few days before the Convention as follows:—

> Every county in the State has chosen delegates to the Frederick Convention favorable to you and the delegates to Cincinnati will be for you unanimously. Would you desire simply to have your recognized friends chosen, or would you prefer a vote of instructions in addition? You can have whichever you prefer.

Mr. Blaine replied as follows:—

> Ordinarily I should be unwilling to express any preference as to what a State convention might do touching myself; but of late, as you well know, a very persistent attempt has been made to throw mud at me, and a pronounced expression from the Maryland Convention in my favor would at this time be gratefully received.

JAMAICA, May 1, 1876.

Great excitement prevails here over the news of the disturbances in Barbados. The natives are jubilant over the demonstrations. Troops have been hurried off from here in Her Majesty's ship Argus.

ALARM IN KINGSTON.

Unless there is a more conciliatory policy pursued in Jamaica an outbreak in Kingston is feared.

Waste of public money also exasperates the colonists.

The Legislative Assembly of this State in extraordinary session on the 16th inst. elected General Buenaventura Correoso, Manuel Murilla Toro and Damaso Corvera Senators to the national Congress.

THE AQUEDUCT PROJECT.

The Assembly also defined the law on the aqueduct project, specifying that the five per cent annual interest guaranteed by the State on the capital invested is additional to the seven per cent guaranteed by the national government. The Assembly also empowered the Executive to invest $5,000 of the State funds in the aqueduct enterprise.

BOLIVIA.

Rumors of a coming revolution in Bolivia are rife.

PERU.

Advices from Peru state that the absence of Mariano y Prado, the supposed President-elect, has led to dissensions. Señor Riva Aguero, the candidate for the First Vice Presidency, and Señor Canevara, candidate for the Second Vice Presidency, are also in Europe. New candidates for these latter posts have been pushed forward at the risk of a split in the party. It is rumored that Congress, in July next, will ignore the elections and declare the present incumbent, Don Manuel Durdo, Provisional President for two years.

THE TRADE IN NITRATE.

The export of nitrate is rapidly falling off.

THE CHINESE.

Another Chinese rising in Peru was frustrated.

CHILI.

AN ALABAMA CLAIM CASE.

DISPUTE BETWEEN FATHER AND SON UPON AN AWARD.

Mr. A. G. Benson, President of the United States Guano Company, has entered a sworn protest against the payment of damages awarded by the International Court of Commissioners for the destruction of the ships Golden Eagle and Avon by the rebel cruisers Alabama and Florida during the war. The amount awarded is $60,000. Mr. Benson has made an affidavit before United States Commissioner Winslow in Brooklyn, in which he states that while entirely unfit to transact any business about May 14, 1875, he signed certain papers brought to him by his son, George W. Benson, the Secretary and Treasurer of said company. He was told these documents were necessary in the proceedings, but has since learned that it was an assignment of and a power of attorney for the collection of one-half the above claim. He alleges that about the month of July, 1875, George W. Benson assigned a fraudulent claim against the said company for his salary to one Warner, who in turn sued said company for said claim, and George W. Benson allowed judgment to be obtained by default, and subsequently appeared before the Court and declared the company to be insolvent, with the exception of a claim before the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims. Subsequently the deponent caused application to be made in the Supreme Court, New York, for a stay of proceedings on the ground of "collusion and fraud on the part of said Secretary George W. Benson, Edgar F. Brown and one Warner to defraud the stockholders of the company, and Judge Brady immediately granted the same." Mr. Benson now learns, as set forth in the affidavit, that these parties are endeavoring to obtain the amount to be paid under the award, and he "begs and prays that the award shall not be issued" to them. He asks that the money shall be held by the treasury until such time as the company shall take action in the matter and empower their president or legal representative to receive the said award for the benefit of the stockholders of said company, or for such other relief as may be required.

It is said that the Secretary of the Treasury will hold the award till the settlement of the pending legal disputes.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

The United States steamer Vandalia is at Port au Prince, while the United States steamer Plymouth is coaling and provisioning at Jamaica.

FATAL FERRY ACCIDENT.

About 7:20 P. M. yesterday, as the ferry boat Superior, of the Roosevelt street line, was entering the slip at the foot of Broadway, Williamsburg, a man fell overboard. The boat was backed instantly, but the proper appliances not being at hand the poor fellow was drowned. He was a man about thirty-five years of age, five feet seven inches in height, light complexion, with sandy hair and whiskers.

AVOIDING NEW YORK.

The new arrangement for carrying through passengers between all points on the Pennsylvania Railroad and New England, without change of cars, went into effect yesterday morning. Upon the arrival of the Southern train at Jersey City it was run on board the steamer Maryland, which carried it thence across the harbor and via East River to Harlem River, where the train took the rail again and proceeded eastward. A large party of invited guests made an excursion to inaugurate the novelty.

ROBBED AND DROWNED.

Yesterday at noon, while Police Officer Jacobus, of the Hoboken Police force, was patrolling his post in Newark street, near the ferry, he discovered a dead body floating in the river. Jacobus ran down to the ferry and procured the assistance of several of the employés, and by the aid of ropes the body was dragged ashore. The skull appeared to have been crushed by some blunt instrument. The pockets had been turned out, suggesting the idea that the dead man had been robbed and then murdered.

THE BIG HORN EXPEDITION.

PREPARATIONS FOR ITS DEPARTURE FROM FORT LINCOLN—OBJECTS ON THE MOVEMENT—A BAND OF INDIAN SCOUTS TO ACCOMPANY THE TROOPS.

FORT LINCOLN, April 30, 1876.

To cause certain bands of the Sioux nation to curb their warlike propensities and go to the reservations set apart for them is the purpose of an expedition now being organized at Fort Abraham Lincoln, Dakota Territory. In the fastnesses of the mountains on either side of the Big Horn River and in the country adjacent thereto there have been encamped for a number of years bands of Indians who have declined the aid offered them by the government, preferring to maintain an independent life and support themselves rather than submit to the care of agents appointed to exercise a kindly surveillance over their welfare. Unfortunately, however, they have not confined themselves entirely to the chase, but have made raids on the settlers of Montana and Dakota, stealing stock, plundering ranches and killing the inhabitants, until they have inaugurated such a reign of terror that their numbers are popularly supposed to be hundreds of thousands instead of two or three thousand. At all of the agencies on the Missouri River there are numbers of whom it would be impossible to please under any circumstances. Then there are certain young men anxious to make a name for themselves in order to gain influence in their tribe, and which, should they remain quietly on the reservation, they could not accomplish. From these classes the hostile Indians receive their recruits, and as they are generally desperate characters, without much to lose but everything to gain, they make good fighting men. In addition to their fighting qualities they are well armed with the improved fire arms, have plenty of ammunition, obtaining these from unscrupulous traders, and living as they do in a section of the country but very little known, it is not to be wondered at that they are feared by the poor settlers of the frontier, who have but few arms of any kind, and who, if they had, could not protect themselves, for they are scattered over the country at such distances from each other that there is no such thing as mutual protection. To the inhabitants of a large city the organization of an expedition for duty on the Plains seems an easy task, more so, if they have not forgotten the rapid movements of troops during the late war. Could they know the

and realize the immense amount of time necessary to get things together, their ideas would change. We will take the present expedition as an example. When it was determined to drive the hostile Sioux to their reservations and the number of troops that were to accomplish this decided upon, it became necessary to draw troops from posts where they could not be spared and replace them to some extent by companies from other stations. In order to do this companies have been ordered from Fort Ripley, Minnesota, Pembina, Fort Buford, Fort Rice, Standing Rock, and three companies of the Seventh cavalry have been ordered up from the South. A large wagon train being required to carry supplies many of the posts in the department have been directed to furnish their proper proportion of transportation. Subsistence stores are ordered from the different stations to make up the supply requisite. Teamsters have to be employed, and it was necessary, in order to procure experienced packers, to send to St. Paul for them. So it will be seen that the formation of an expedition requires much time and labor besides being a very expensive undertaking. In order to counterbalance the expense it is desirable that its mission be a successful one, and its success depends entirely upon the officer selected to command, who must be of indomitable energy and will in order to enable him to overcome the thousand and one obstacles he will find in his march through the wilderness.

FORCES IN CAMP.

The grounds surrounding Fort Lincoln recall vividly the scenes witnessed during the war. They are dotted with different camps, made by the companies reporting for duty with the expedition. In one portion the cavalry is located, in another the battery of Gatling guns; then there is the infantry camp, and last the immense wagon train with its numerous attendants. Orderlies and messengers may be seen galloping in all directions, seemingly intent on business of some kind; teamsters earnestly arguing with refractory mules and the general condition of the atmosphere surrounding the fort would convince an outsider most thoroughly that the dogs of war were about to be let loose.

There yet remains considerable to be done before the command can take the field, and as not all of the companies have arrived it is impossible to give the personnel of it, but it is known there will be twelve companies of the Seventh Cavalry, six companies of infantry, a battery of Gatling guns and a detachment of Indian scouts.

DEATH OF MRS. G. H. MUMFORD.

Mumford, late Vice President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, died in this city of apoplexy yesterday morning. Her body was sent East to-day. Her son, George H. Mumford, Jr., was also at one time a vice president of the Western Union Company.

WALL STREET,
MONDAY, May 8—6 P. M.

Bulls, emulous of the Jersey Heights explosion, touched off their dynamite at the opening to-day, to the distraction of bears and and trepidation of undecided shorts. The report turned out to be more noisy than noxious, for the damage done proved as inconsiderable as that from the Hoboken affair and was about as soon over.

The burst up was chiefly confined to Lake Shore and Western Union, the first springing up suddenly from 53½ to 54⅜, and the latter from 66⅜ to 67⅛, from which point prices fell almost as rapidly to the figures they started from, though later in the day a second rally was established of about ⅜ per cent, which was sustained to the close. Speculation is confined almost entirely to these two favorites, although the Twenty-third street bears are keeping an evil eye on Michigan Central, which they esteem only with letting alone and watching carefully for the present. The Rufus Hatch party in Western Union are probably somewhat disappointed to-day that their injunction great gun has exploded with such ineffectual result, and that the feu de joie which was to send prices flying upward has fallen as tamely on the ear of a disbelieving public as the report of a penny squib. The result was that the stock closed at but a fraction better than it opened at, being unable to resist those demoralizing seller sixties at a half per cent below the market and the feeding out the long shares which Mr. Gould (having got wind of the injunction movement) complacently and adroitly possessed himself of for the purpose of "sparing" them to the ex-managing director and his shipmates when an eligible opportunity offered.

The Lake Shore move appears to be built upon no stronger foundation than that of the telegraph fancy. The extensive short interest, the existence of which is plainly shown by the expression of brokers' opinion, in the comparative scarcity of shares for delivery, has created an opportunity for a turn upward, sharply and unexpectedly, as we have more than once suggested as likely to occur.

From all we can gather this phenomenal bull creation owes its paternity to a bear source (which seems to be mixing matters, to say the least), and its sires are no other than Messrs. Cammack, Work and Henry Smith.

The effect of the movement is, of course, to force sickly and impecunious bears to cover, which act being accomplished, as it speedily will be, the rise will probably terminate as quickly as it began.

The business of the day was somewhat broken into by the election for board officers, which drew off the attention of members; consequently there is nothing to be recorded of the general list save that it remained steady and dull.

There was manifested some little interest, however, in the Western stocks, based on the adjournment of the United States Supreme Court until October, which was accepted as a conclusion that no opinion in respect to the Granger case would be issued before the fall.

Money ruled at 3 a 4 per cent, and stocks generally loaned at 2 and 3, with the exception of Michigan Central and Central Hudson, which brought a bonus of 1-32 to 1-16 for delivery on short contracts.

GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Government bonds were in better demand from investors, and the market closed firm at the following quotations:—United States currency sixes, 127¼ a 127½; do. sixes, 1881, registered, 121⅛ a 121¼; do. do., do., coupon, 122⅛ a 122⅜; do. do., 1865, registered, 114⅛ a 114¼; do. do., do., coupon, 114⅜ a 114⅞; do. do., do., new, registered, 118⅞ a 119; do. do., do., do., coupon, 118⅞ a 119; do. do., 1867, registered, 121 a 121⅛; do. do., do., coupon, 121 a 121⅛; do. do., 1868, registered, 122⅝ a 123; do. do., do., coupon, 122⅝ a 123; do. do., ten-forties, registered, 117⅞ a 118⅛; do. do., do., coupon, 118⅝ a 119; do. fives, 1881, registered, 117⅜ a 117½; do. do., do., coupon, 117⅜ a 117½.

INVESTMENT SHARES.

Investment securities are generally steady. We quote sales as follows:—Rock Island, 104⅞; New Jersey Central, 97 a 96¾ a 97 a 97½; Cleveland and Pittsburg guaranteed, 94½ a 94¼ a 94½; Harlem, 138; New York Central, 110 a 110¼; Delaware and Hudson Canal, 112 a 111⅞; United States Express, 71; Delaware and Lackawanna 108.

THE UNITED STATES TREASURY.

The Sub-Treasury paid out this morning $20,000 gold on account of interest and $2,000 in redemption of five-twenty bonds, $6,700 silver to applicants here, $22,000 on Washington drafts and $170,000 on currency checks and Clearing House certificates. We note an entire disappearance of the premium on silver. This is due to the announcement of Saturday that the Treasury sub-treasurers were prepared to pay large sums. It is also to be noted that there is a freer interchange on the part of individuals, and really more care for small currency than for coin. Revenue receipts to-day, $1,000,000; customs receipts, $600,000; bank notes received, $900,000.

Secretary Bristow decides that the United States Assistant Treasurer cannot pay out silver in exchange for Clearing House certificates.

The silver payments to-day were:—Under $100 limit, $13,725; on silver drafts, $34,000, and on currency checks and drafts, $358,650.

STATE BONDS.

In State bonds the dealings were confined to New York registered bounty loan at 104⅝ and Tennessees at 41⅝ for new and new series; old Tennessees at 43. District of Columbia bonds sold at 71⅛.

THE FOREIGN MARKET.

The following are quotations reported at two P. M.:—Consols for money, 96¼; do. for account, 96¼; 1865 bonds (old), 104½ a 104¾; 1867 bonds, 109½ a 109¾; ten-forty bonds, 107½; new fives, 106½; Erie, 13¼; Erie preferred, 20 a 22. It is impossible to present further reports, because of the weakness of the cable lines, another of which it is said is broken.

MINING NEWS.

The California mine, Nevada, is at this time yielding 250 to 300 tons of ore daily, worth between $50,000 and $60,000. This amount keeps the mill running to its full capacity day and night. The product for the fiscal month of April was over $1,600,000. The ores from this mine are so rich as to create unexpected difficulties in their amalgamation. The north drift on the 1,400 foot level is being extended to connect with the Ophir mine.

A dividend of two per cent has been declared by the Consolidated Virginia Mining Company, payable next Thursday, out of the earnings of the past month. The mills are now engaged in their usual monthly settlements, and show the product to have been but little under $2,500,000. The dividend will amount to $1,080,000, and the current expenses about $300,000, leaving a balance of about $1,120,000 to be carried to the surplus fund. Another large new mill has been ordered in connection with this mine. It will contain eighty stamps, and will be erected near the Joint C. and C. shaft. The daily ore product of several leading mines is as follows:—

	Tons.		Tons.
Consolidated Virginia	550	Ophir	150
Belcher	450	Choliar	60
California	250	Imperial	50

The dividends paid by the Northern Belle Mine to date reach $600,000. The property was purchased four years ago for $35,000, and is now valued at $2,000,000.

The following treasure was sent to China from San Francisco, on May 1:—

Trade dollars	$232,868
Mexican dollars	40,393
Gold coin and dust	4,219
Silver bars	5,000
Total	$282,485

The Cariboo Silver Mine, Boulder county, Colorado, produced $200,000 last year, but paid no dividend. The mine was sold some two years ago to the Mining Company Nederland, at The Hague, for $3,000,000.

The new Almaden quicksilver mines, at San José, Cal., were worked to only a limited extent from 1846 to 1853. Since that time they have produced 606,453 flasks, equal to 46,393,654 pounds. They are, with the exception of the Almaden mines of Spain, the most productive quicksilver mines in the world. About 600 men are employed at all times. The reduction works contain nine furnaces. During eleven years ending last December the shafting, drifting and other mining work amounted to 129,724 lineal feet, costing $1,000,000 gold.

Mr. C. H. Fish has been elected President of the Consolidated Virginia Mining Company in place of Mr. Edward Barron, resigned. The mine was recently thrown open to public inspection to counteract recent statements that the rich ore body was approaching exhaustion.

GOSSIP ON THE STREET.

The Loaners' Bank is waiting news from out-of-town depositors before it is able to say whether it will resume or not.

Silver and fractionals are both down to par, with a falling off in the demand.

On the checks and drafts presented at the Treasury most of the parties take some silver. Others will not touch it. The banks generally take it.

The Western Union Telegraph Company are refusing cable business, and a pretty well authenticated report says their cable is again broken.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Richard Schell having petitioned for a discharge, a hearing in the matter was set down for yesterday before Register Allen, of No. 152 Broadway. It appearing, however, that the assignee had not published his appointment, as required by law, the hearing was adjourned until May 3, at eleven A. M., to give the assignee sufficient time to publish the notice of his appointment.

At Register Allen's office yesterday the re-examination of certain claims proved against the estate of Francis Many and James Marshall, bankrupts, and the examination of Otto Huster, dealer in furs, of Maiden lane, bankrupt, took place.

At the first meeting of the creditors of John Coar, held yesterday before Register Ketchum, Bonnett Building, a few debts were proven and Mr. C. W. Van Duren was elected assignee.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

ALL THE MARSHALS CONFIRMED—MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held yesterday afternoon. The principal business of the session consisted of the appointing of city marshals.

Mayor Wickham sent in a communication nominating the following named persons for city marshals:—John Duggan, jr.; Daniel O'Brien, Matthew Beirne, John R. Farrington, Louis Levy, George Bouccessin, Thomas Cunningham, Patrick Daly, Patrick Feeny, Nathan Frank, Louis McDermott and Richard M Lush.

A motion was made by Alderman Sauer, as these names did not complete the list, that the Board take a recess for ten minutes in order that the character of the applicants might be examined and approved. It was also agreed to ascertain whether Mayor Wickham desired to send in the names of the other eleven marshals before the Board should adjourn. This motion was carried. After recess very few of the members returned to the chamber, and Alderman Morris moved an adjournment of the meeting until Thursday next. The motion was lost.

Alderman Morris then moved that the Board proceed to confirm the nominations, and after some discussion the following were confirmed:—Messrs. Duggan, Brien, O'Beirne, Levy, Bouccessin, Cunningham, Daly, Feeny, Frank, McDermott and Lush.

Other nominations were also recommended and confirmed, as follows:—George Hatzel, David Ullman, Thomas McGrath, Lawrence A. Curry, Patrick J. Hanbury, John T. Reilly, Abram Bernard, Matthew Nugent, Richard Walsh, John G. Lyst and Denis Galvin.

Mr. Farrington's nomination was rejected, President Lewis, Aldermen Bryan Reilly, Pinckney and Billings voting in the affirmative. Mr. Galvin was elected in place of Mr. Farrington, and after the transaction of some routine business the Board adjourned.

The dredging of the slips in Wallabout Docks, at an expense not to exceed $5,000, was ordered.

From a report of the Board of City Works it appears that $232,637 66 had been expended last year, and they will need $227,945 for the ensuing year.

THE NAVY YARD INVESTIGATION.

CONTINUATION OF TESTIMONY BEFORE THE CONGRESSIONAL SUB-COMMITTEE.

The sub-committee of the Congressional Naval Investigating Committee now inquiring into Brooklyn Navy Yard affairs were in session taking testimony all day yesterday. Those examined were Messrs. H. Ellis, Henry Roscoe, J. H. Creed, Devlin B. Carr, Walton, of Walton Brothers; Charles A. Jones, James Borland, Hugh Lackey, M. Kane, Isaac Hall, John F. Wilson, John Roach, George Weed, P. J. Herrick, Frederick C. Smith and Captain Fuller.

The principal testimony taken was that of Mr. Roach, the well-known shipbuilder, who gave a minute account of all his governmental contracts for the past ten years. The committee interrogated Mr. Roach closely as to the differences between engines of certain classes and the cost of building such. He was asked especially to account for the sale of that derrick to the government, about which some false accusations had been made. He explained that the derrick was purchased by him with the entire stock of the Morgan Iron Works, and was then appraised at $50,000. He was subsequently asked by the government to build a similar one, and plans and specifications were prepared, the estimates of which placed the cost of the new derrick at $100,000. An offer was then made from the government to buy the old derrick, and it was accordingly sold for $60,000, a sale which was authorized by a government commission appointed to advise concerning it. As to the statements set afloat concerning the Trenton, Mr. Roach explained that he was under bonds to the amount of $600,000 for the faithful performance of that contract, and it was unlikely he would invalidate it for sake of the saving of a few hundred dollars, all that could be gained, supposing that the circulated assertions in regard to the vessel were not utterly without foundation. As to his other contracts with the government he stated that his contract for the two sloops of war he built was at $580,000 for each, and this bid was accepted, when the lowest bid against him was $700,000, a fact which showed, he said, that there could have been no chance for bribery in the affair. Mr. Roach presented all the contracts he had made with the government during the past ten years, and explained that in each the award was made to him because his bid was the fairest and lowest. In a business which covered, during the ten years, the large amount of $13,000,000 in contracts, only $3,000,000 were negotiated with the government. The committee questioned the witness closely as to whether he had ever secured the patronage of the government either by bribery or by giving money for political party purposes. He said in reply that he was not a partisan in politics in any sense, but he had given freely to both parties for political campaigns. He had contributed largely to Governor Hoffman's campaign, and on other occasions to democratic as well as republican contests. He did not give the money to influence directly any patronage from the government. With the procuring of supplies for the navy yard he had nothing to do; his business with the government had been entirely under contracts, for which he had put in bids in the same way as his competitors had done.

Captain Fuller, a teamster in the Fire Department of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, testified that he had never been assessed for political purposes since his connection with the navy yard.

The testimony of the other witnesses was not very material.

Mr. George Weed, Mr. Roach's superintendent, was instructed to prepare a schedule of all the contracts made between his employer and the government during the past ten years and of the moneys received, &c., during that time, and some testimony was also given in connection with these contracts by Mr. Herrick, the shipping clerk in Mr. Roach's establishment.

The committee will meet again to-day, but will probably leave this city in time to attend the opening of the Centennial Exposition.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

The forty-eighth annual meeting of the American Seamen's Friend Society was held yesterday afternoon at the Sailors' Home, No. 190 Cherry street. The business on hand was the reading of an abstract of the report of the Board and the election of trustees for the coming three years. Rev. R. P. Buck, Rev. H. Loomis, D. D., William A. Booth, James Demarest, Horace Gray, Reuben W. Ropes, Rev. E. D. G. Prime, D. D., and William Wood were elected trustees.

ROBBERY IN THE SANCTUARY.

Among the congregation of the Church of the Holy Trinity on Sunday night last were two suspicious looking characters who attracted the attention of Dr. Tyng. After the services were concluded the sexton locked the church. The two men remained after the congregation had gone, and yesterday morning Dr. Tyng found his study broken into and coin to the value of $15 stolen fom a drawer. In the place of the money he found a photograph of one of the thieves, left there, no doubt, as a sample of impudence. The picture was sent to Superintendent Walling.

THE HUMAN FIEND

Details of Thomas W. Piper's Frightful Confession.

A THIRST FOR BLOOD.

The Murderer of Bridget Landregan and Mabel Young.

BOSTON, May 8, 1876.

Thomas W. Piper's confession is startling in its comprehension of crimes of which he was not before suspected of being the perpetrator and which were equally atrocious and horrible with the fatal mauling of little Mabel Young. Until Saturday he had constantly asserted his innocence and had written an affecting farewell to his mother, probably for effect, in which he sought to convey the impression that his

by the gibbet would be judicial murder in its most odious sense. On the day of his confession his counsel had moved for a new trial, which, if accorded, might possibly have resulted in his escape through the uncertainty of circumstantial evidence. It was represented that facts had been newly discovered favorable to the prisoner. He had, however, gradually weakened in the stubbornness of his denial.

THE SHOCK OF HIS CONVICTION

had been felt by him terribly, and the struggle to maintain an appearance of wronged innocence had changed his appearance so much that his awful doom is written on his emaciated features. He had been informed that, even if a new trial were granted, its result would, probably, be the same as that of the two former ones, and his desperate hope failed him.

THE TRAGEDY IN THE BELFRY.

In his confession he says in relation to Mabel Young:—

I took the bat from the lower room before or about the commencement of school to kill somebody at that time. I carried it up into the auditorium, but during the session of Sunday school took it from the auditorium and carried it to the belfry. After the close of school I came down stairs and opened the doors. Then I went up again at the time I sent away the boys who were playing in the vestibule. After the boys had gone out, and I was still in the vestibule, the little girl came up stairs, and I induced her to go with me into the belfry. There I struck her with the club two or three times, and she fell where the blood was found. Then I picked her up and carried the body to the place where it was discovered.

ANOTHER MURDER.

The murder of Bridget Landregan occurred three years ago. Thomas Cahill was arrested on suspicion of being the murderer and suffered a long and tedious imprisonment. Piper confesses it in explicit terms. On December 3, 1873, he was under the influence of whiskey and opium and deliberately prepared a club to kill some one. He saw Bridget on the street and followed close behind her. He says:—

I struck her. Immediately she fell down, and I struck her again. While I was stooping over the body I saw a man coming, so I started off and ran away. I got over the fence and went along toward the railroad. While I was up the bank at the railroad somebody called out to me, and I then turned back, took a roundabout course and got home. On the way home it occurred to me that I had a knife in my pocket which might be recognized in some manner, and so I threw it away.

A MYSTERIOUS ASSAULT.

Piper also confesses that he was the assailant of Mary Tyrer, who was so mysteriously beaten on July 1, 1874, but after lying for months between life and death recovered her health but not her reason, and is now an inmate of an insane asylum. He says that he attempted to kill her, and that the murder of Mabel Young and of Bridget Landregan were both prompted by the use of rum and opium, under the influence of which he had a crazy desire to shed blood.

NO NEW TRIAL.

In the Supreme Judicial Court this morning the counsel of Piper, Mr. E. P. Brown, said he would not press the motion for a new trial in view of a conversation he had had with the prisoner. Judges Colt and Lord thereupon overruled the motion.

SUSPECTED CUNNING OF PIPER.

The Evening Herald says:—

There is a feeling abroad among lawyers, detectives and the public generally that the contradictory statements now put out by Piper are the result of cool reasoning on his part, and of such ingenuity as he is possessed of, in order to throw doubt upon his sanity in general, or else to show that he has an uncontrollable mania for blood for which he is not responsible, and a change in his statement either in the confession of more murders or the denial of all would not at this moment astonish the community.

ANOTHER HORROR.

A HORSE CAR, CROWDED WITH PASSENGERS, THROWN INTO A DEEP PIT—TWELVE PERSONS WOUNDED—SOME LIKELY TO DIE.

Last evening a fearful catastrophe occurred on the Bergen Hill elevator, situated five blocks distant from the spot where the explosion occurred last Saturday. Car No. 7, belonging to the West Hoboken line of the North Hudson Railroad Company, left Hoboken at thirty-five minutes after seven for West Hoboken and arrived at the foot of Bergen Hill about eight minutes later. The car contained about twenty-seven people, men, women and children. It was about being placed on the elevator platform, which would lift it up by hydraulic pressure to the bow of the hill, when by some unexplained accident the elevator commenced to go up. The two horses had only placed their fore feet on it. The animals were in an instant thrown into the pit into which the elevator sinks after its descent from the top of the hill. This is thirteen feet deep.

The sudden fall of the horses gave the car to which they were attached an impetus which sent it into the pit after them. The occurrence was so sudden that only one or two had an opportunity to leave the car. The others went into the pit with the car, pell mell, and the air was immediately rent by screams from the wounded. A force of men soon got to work to lift the unfortunate people out of the cars.

THE WOUNDED.

The following are the names of the hurt as far as ascertained up to the time of going to press:—

Mr. Hombronck, of Palisade avenue, Jersey City, badly injured.

Mr. Frank Gehring, of New York avenue, Jersey City, shoulder blade and two ribs broken; supposed to be injured internally.

Mr. Julius Groeschel, Hutton street, Jersey City; internal injuries and supposed to be fatally injured.

Mr. Julius Beltu, No. 116 Washington street, Hoboken; severely injured; taken to Charity Hospital, Jersey City.

Mrs. Catharine Hastings, No. 362 Palisade avenue, severe scalp wound and reported concussion of the brain. Drs. Stout and Hornblower, who attended her and other patients, believe Mrs. Hastings to be fatally hurt.

A nephew of Frederick Belta, above mentioned, is seriously injured.

A niece of Dr. Landis, residing on Jersey City Heights, and a lady friend of hers were badly injured.

Conrad Busch, No. 105 Sherman avenue, dislocated foot and internal injuries.

N. Richell, of New York, slight injuries.

Michael Maslin, Jersey City, slightly injured.

J. Weybler, Jersey City, fractured skull and broken leg; taken to Henning's Hotel.

A number of the wounded were conveyed to the Third sub-police station at Webster avenue, where they were attended, and thence sent home in ambulances or carriages. The doctors of the neighborhood lent all assistance possible and the police showed great tenderness and kindness in handling the wounded. Fortunately plenty of stretchers were at hand. Hundreds of people gathered round the scene of disaster and intense excitement existed in the neighborhood till the early hours this morning.

THE CAR AND HORSES.

One of the horses was killed. The other, when hauled out, made its escape in the direction of Hoboken. The car was subsequently hauled up on the elevator by means of ropes, and then taken from off it. It was very much smashed. Travel was resumed on the elevator at about half-past ten o'clock.

WHAT THE ENGINEER SAYS.

In conversation with Mr. Alfred Deverhons, the engineer of the elevator, he said:—The elevator has been running over a year, and we have never before had an accident. I think that the recent explosion or recent damp weather has put the telegraphic gear out of order. I can't blame the truckman, for he is a very attentive man.

The name of the truckman below who gave the signal to start is Spencer.

Among those who were fortunate enough to escape injury were Alderman Powell and Mr. Scanlan. The former gentleman had sufficient presence of mind when he saw the car sliding backward to jump from the rear platform on which he had been standing. He rendered great service to the wounded persons. In the midst of the shrieks and excitement the driver cried out, "Oh, my poor horses."

WHERE THE BLAME LIES.

The cause of the disaster, in spite of the assertion of the engineer that the telegraphic apparatus is to blame, appears to be that the signal to lift the elevator was given before the car was secured upon the platform.

AMUSEMENTS.

ENGLISH OPERA AT BOOTH'S.

The Kellogg English Opera Troupe opened last evening at Booth's Theatre in the "Star of the North." The company is a very strong one, and, judging from the crowded attendance at the theatre last night despite the extremely hot weather, the managers will have to forego their intention of having "only a week" of English opera. The play was superbly put on the stage; the scenery was magnificent in every respect, and apparently nothing was left undone by the management to give Miss Kellogg's troupe all the sway possible to "make success successful." Miss Kellogg was in splendid voice, as was Mrs. Zelda Seguin, and they richly deserved the enthusiastic rounds of applause with which they were greeted. Too much praise cannot be accorded to the choruses. The English opera will be the feature at Booth's for the balance of the week.

EAGLE THEATRE.

At this house, last night, a new piece was produced. It is entitled "Adelaide," and is written by Miss Adelaide Lennox, who also interprets the principal rôle. As this is, we believe, Miss Lennox's first attempt as a playwright, it would be unfair to criticise it severely, but we may suggest that some pruning would add to the effectiveness of the piece. Miss Lennox as Adelaide, the title rôle, acted admirably and received well deserved applause from a large and appreciative audience. Among the other parts calling for special notice were that of Lucy Fairweather, which was played by Miss Jennie Hughes with all her usual piquancy. Mr. Crossen was a fair Sir Harry Hawthorn and Mr. Heeley was acceptable as Hammersmith. The performance concluded with Byron's burlesque of "Cinderella," in which Minnie Palmer appeared as Dandino and Miss Gorenflo as Cinderella.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

A nautical and sensation drama called "Roving Jack" was played at this theatre last evening to an enthusiastic audience. Mr. J. Z. Little played the dual part of Roving Jack and Harry Elleston with much spirit and received efficient support from Mr. D'Orsay Ogden and Miss Sylvester. Miss Sylvester is a painstaking actress and is very popular. "Roving Jack" is an exciting drama and is well supplied with incidents and effects of a startling character.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

To-night Dr. S. M. Landis appears as Hamlet at Tammany Hall, assisted by an imaginary company. The Count Joannes is invited to be present, and will, we hope, take advantage of the opportunity of critical observation Dr. Landis has one advantage: he has an imaginary company, while the Count was burdened by a real one.

"Conscience," the new play of which Messrs. A. E. Lancaster and Julian Magnus are the authors, will be produced at the Union Square Theatre this evening. The literary reputation of these gentlemen assures the public of an intelligent work, at least, and a brilliantly written dialogue. Messrs. Shook & Palmer will bring out "Conscience" with new and magnificent scenery, and the cast will include the finest members of the company.

A WAGGISH FORGERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In your edition of Sunday, May 7, some "wag" has forged my name to an article headed "Courtesy to the Count," to which he annexed a purported notice from a Philadelphia paper, which notice is true, only that the play was not "Hamlet," but "The Fiend; or, Torturer of Innocence," which is a "blood-and-thunder" tragedy, and in which "so much killing and violence were probably never before condensed."

I hope, Mr. Editor, you will do me the justice of inserting this note, as I do not wish to be misrepresented to the citizens of New York city. Faithfully,

S. M. LANDIS, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8, 1876.

ENTERTAINMENT POSTPONED.

The fête champêtre and drill of the Forty-seventh regiment, advertised to take place last evening, was postponed on account of the rain, and will be given this evening, at eight o'clock, on the Union Base Ball Grounds, Brooklyn. The grounds are to be illuminated with calcium lights. There will be a grand display of fireworks, and the entertainment will conclude with dancing on the green.

PRESS CLUB RECEPTION.

Last night a goodly number of guests were entertained by the Press Club at their rooms with music, recitation and song and with some of the good things of this life, which cheer the inner man. A fair representation of the members of the club attended, several of whom contributed by their efforts to make the affair thoroughly enjoyable, and a number of prominent musicians and gentlemen, eminent in elocutionary art, spared themselves no pains in making the hours pass pleasantly away. Superintendent Walling and Police Commissioner Smith were present, with Messrs. Rufus F. Andrews, G. W. Carleton and other well known gentlemen. Letters from Dom Pedro and Mark Twain were read, expressing regret at inability to attend. Messrs. Karl, Gottschalk, Clarke, Staal and the English Glee Club contributed their efforts to make up a very choice musical programme, and Professor Raymond and Mr. Kase recited various selections. At about 11 o'clock M. Jacques Offenbach arrived, accompanied by Maurice Grau, and made a good humored reply to an address tendered him on behalf of the club by Mr. James J. D. Trenor. On the whole the reception had all the elements of pleasure.

HASTINGS SPEAKS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In your issue of April 28 you have unintentionally placed me in rather an unpleasant light, owing undoubtedly to a mistake of your reporter, which I desire to correct. I am represented as having tempted two newsboys to pick my pocket by having "stopped on the sidewalk and pretended to gaze abstractedly at the upper story of a building, hoping the lads would take advantage of the opportunity" to pick my pocket of a ten-cent stamp which I had previously seen them eyeing. You further quote me as saying that I wished to "see how the thing was done." The truth is, as appeared in my cross-examination yesterday, the money was snatched from my pocket while walking, and the boy was captured by a policeman, without my assistance, and not by me, "with the assistance of an officer," as you state. I was politely informed that if I did not appear at the Tombs at six o'clock on the following morning I would be locked up in the House of Detention for contempt. After being compelled to make a complaint against my will I was summoned before the Grand Jury, where I was detained from my business for several hours, and was again detained half the day yesterday in the Court of General Sessions, and all for ten cents! This poor little newsboy, whom your reporter said had been working in a shoe factory in Massachusetts, was nineteen years old and a trained pickpocket, the "shoe factory" being the Massachusetts State Penitentiary, where he has just served a term of imprisonment for the same offence. His poor mother, whose blasphemous profanity is unequalled by any thief, is the mother of three boys, whom she has had trained as professional thieves, and her only subsistence is the proceeds of her boys' thefts. Your reporter may be right in calling this fellow a "bright-faced newsboy," but he has never sold papers and has never had any occupation but stealing. The next time I have my pocket picked in New York I shall run in an opposite direction and endeavor to avoid the endless amount of trouble which I have had in this case.

Trusting that you will give this statement a space in your valuable columns, and correct the impression that I would tempt a "poor newsboy" and then intentionally prosecute him, I remain, very respectfully, yours,

FRANK S. HASTINGS.

DRAMATIC FUND ASSOCIATION.

The Dramatic Fund Association held its twenty-sixth annual convention at 1,267 Broadway yesterday. The treasurer of the convention read the annual report, which shows that the sum of $51,418 83 is invested and that $84,048 18 has been paid out to widows of deceased members. The total receipts for the past year were $4,647 and the expenditures $4,530. The following board of officers were elected:—President, S. L. M. Barlow; trustees, Robert B. Roosevelt, W. R. Travers, John Brougham; Secretary and Treasurer, W. B. Harrison; Directors, J. G. Gilbert, W. Davidge, W. J. Florence, W. R. Denham, E. J. Taylor, George Beeps, F. S. Chanfrau, C. A. Couldock, T. J. Hind, H. Isherwood, G. Grose and J. H. Stoddart.

LABOR REFORM LEAGUERS.

The forenoon session of the American Labor Reform League Convention yesterday was occupied by the American Anti-Usury Society, Edward Palmer, the President in the chair. One speaker said—Usury is a conspiracy of speculative increase against productive enterprise resting on local statute law.

Mrs. S. M. Hall, a spiritual medium, said that the "Spirit of A. T. Stewart" was present, and indorsed the principles of the league and was very anxious to make amends for the great wrongs he had done labor while in earth life.

At the afternoon session of the Labor Reform Convention letters were read from W. L. Heberling, of Illinois; Hon. George W. Julian, of Indiana; John M. Spear, of Philadelphia; Andrew J. Davis, of New York; John A. Lant and others.

Mr. Heyward said:—Since property is a perishable commodity and requires the interposition of labor to keep it good it really earns nothing, but is a burden of expense. So, if I loan you money on good security, you not only owe me no interest, but I should pay you for taking care of it. If I hired a house of you, all I pay above the cost of repairs, taxes and insurance is really paying for the house itself, and transfers the title of that house, in that proportion, to me. According to "legal justice" I pay for a house many times over, in the form of rent, and yet never own one; I pay a debt many times, in the form of interest, and yet owe that debt still. But, in equity, a man has no more right to be paid for a house or a debt more than once any more than for a day's labor more than once.

Stephen Pearl Andrews, Louis Masquier, R. W. Hume and others followed.

The following resolution was passed:—

Resolved, That the laws of Congress which makes a malignant exponent of superstitious sectarianism, Anthony Comstock, special Supervisor of the United States Mails, is an invasion of the natural right of the people to their most important channel of information; that by the imprisonment under this law of John A. Lant, editor of the New York Toledo Sun, now in the Albany Penitentiary, the freedom of the press is struck down and the sacred right of free inquiry suppressed by the lascivious fanaticism of the Young Men's Christian Association.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

The eleventh annual meeting of the National Temperance Society was held at their rooms, No. 58 Reade street, yesterday afternoon. In the absence of the President, Mr. William E. Dodge, Hon. E. Remington was called to preside. The annual report was presented, which showed the society to be in a prosperous condition. After the acceptance of the report, officers for the ensuing year were elected, Mr. William E. Dodge being again chosen for President and Mr. J. N. Stearns as Corresponding and Recording Secretary, besides a long list of vice presidents and a Board of Managers.

In the evening the anniversary was held at Steinway Hall. Rev. Dr. D. C. Babcock presided, and the report presented at the afternoon meeting was read. Suitable resolutions were also adopted. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Hepworth and Revs. Messrs. Kennard, Vail and J. W. Curtin. The exercises were interspersed with vocal and instrumental music.

THE BROOKLYN DEFALCATION.

Yesterday forenoon the case of Henry A. Solomons, the alleged defaulting ex-Cashier of the Brooklyn Department of Arrears of Taxes, was to have been heard in the Third District Court of that city before Justice Riley, but when the prisoner was asked if he was ready for trial he replied that he was not. Solomons, who looked haggard and careworn, stated that he would be grateful to His Honor if he would adjourn the examination in order to enable him to confer with his counsel, whom up to the present he had not seen. The Court adjourned the examination till Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, and the prisoner was remanded to jail.
